ABOUT THE URBAN INSTITUTE

The nonprofit Urban Institute is dedicated to elevating the debate on social and economic policy. For nearly five decades, Urban scholars have conducted research and offered evidence-based solutions that improve lives and strengthen communities across a rapidly urbanizing world. Their objective research helps expand opportunities for all, reduce hardship among the most vulnerable, and strengthen the effectiveness of the public sector.

ABOUT ACF/OPRE

The Administration for Children & Families (ACF) is a division of the U.S. Department of Health & Human Services (HHS). ACF promotes the economic and social well-being of families, children, individuals and communities. The Office of Planning, Research, and Evaluation (OPRE) studies ACF programs and the populations they serve through rigorous research and evaluation projects. These include evaluations of existing programs, evaluations of innovative approaches to helping low-income children and families, research syntheses, and descriptive and exploratory studies.

ABOUT THE WELFARE RULES DATABASE

The Welfare Rules Database is maintained by the Urban Institute under funding from the Administration for Children and Families, Office of Planning, Research, and Evaluation. This project produces a comprehensive, up-to-date database of TANF policies for the 50 states and the District of Columbia. The database contains hundreds of variables and is designed to capture TANF policies across time. The data are made available for public use; for more information visit <https://wrd.urban.org>.

Acknowledgments

The authors owe thanks to all the individuals who helped to design the project and these tables, who provided and verified the data, and who assisted in carrying out the project tasks.

Particular thanks are owed to the ACF project officer, Girley Wright, and other HHS staff for their continued guidance on the project and their review of this report. We also greatly appreciate the many state administrators and staff who provided the detailed policy documents on which these tables are based and conducted often time-consuming reviews of draft tables to improve their accuracy and relevance. The project would not be possible without their substantial involvement.

We are grateful to Kara Harkins for their ongoing technical support as the lead programmer for the project. We also recognize the contributions of numerous past Urban Institute colleagues—too numerous to name here—who collectively assisted in the development, coding, and verification of the earlier policy materials.

This year's Databook is dedicated to Michael Wiseman. Dr. Wiseman, who passed away in April 2020, was a senior advisor to the staff developing the database in the project's early years, recognizing both its challenges and promise. Throughout his public policy career—which included positions at research organizations, in government (including at the Administration for Children and Families), and as a professor—Michael championed the importance of high-quality unbiased data in supporting the policy process.

Introduction and Background

The purpose of this publication—the Welfare Rules Database’s annual Databook—is to provide researchers and policymakers with easy access to detailed information on how states provide cash assistance under the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) program.¹ The dozens of tables in this report collectively describe how states determine eligibility for TANF benefits, how they compute program benefits for eligible families, and the work requirements and time limits that they impose. In Federal Fiscal Year (FFY) 2020, 896,000 families received cash aid from TANF in the average month.²

TANF cash assistance policies vary widely across states due to the nature of the TANF program and funding. TANF is a block grant, providing federal money that states combine with their own funding (there is a “maintenance of effort” or MOE requirement) to meet the goals of the program.³ The four purposes of the program are: to “(1) provide assistance to needy families so that children can be cared for in their own homes or in the homes of relatives; (2) end the dependence of needy parents by promoting job preparation, work, and marriage; (3) prevent and reduce the incidence of out-of-wedlock pregnancies; and (4) encourage the formation and maintenance of two-parent families.”⁴ Some requirements are established at the federal level. However, states are allowed to determine how much of their block grant funds to spend on cash assistance compared with other services, and to establish most of the specific policies used in providing those benefits. State policies—ranging from initial eligibility determination to benefit computation to ongoing eligibility requirements—can vary greatly. For example, a family eligible for several hundred dollars of cash aid each month in one state may be eligible for much less in another state and completely ineligible in a third state. Thus, while

TANF is a single program from the perspective of federal law, in practice the program operates differently in every state.

This publication presents the key policies that each state used to determine cash aid under the TANF program as of July 1, 2020. The Databook also provides longitudinal tables describing various state policies for selected years between 1996 (the year the program was created) and 2020, as well as a list of state policy changes since the 2019 Databook tables. In addition to updating information on all of the TANF policies covered in prior Databooks, this year's Databook also provides information on select policies that were instituted in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. All the tables in this publication are based on the information in the Welfare Rules Database (WRD), a publicly available, online database funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and developed and maintained by the Urban Institute. The Databook summarizes the more detailed information in the WRD. Users interested in more information than is provided in this Databook are encouraged to use the full database, available at <https://wrd.urban.org>. This site includes a point-and-click interface and extensive documentation.

The focus of this publication, and the underlying database, is on the cash aid that is funded wholly or partly by federal TANF dollars. During FFY 2019 (the most recent year for which financial data are available), 21.1 percent of combined federal TANF funds and state maintenance-of-effort (MOE) funds were spent on “basic assistance” (cash aid). Other TANF block grant funds were spent on work, education, and training activities; child care; refundable tax credits; child welfare services; pre-kindergarten/Head Start; out-of-wedlock pregnancy prevention; program management; and other activities.⁵ The WRD covers only the policies for TANF cash aid and related policies such as work requirements for aid recipients; it does not cover policies for other programs that may be provided through TANF block grant funds.

The tables in this Databook are presented in five groups:

1. Initial eligibility in 2020
2. Benefits in 2020
3. Activity Requirements in 2020
4. Ongoing eligibility and transitional benefits in 2020
5. Policies across time, 1996–2020

Each chapter begins with an overview of the policies, followed by information relating to specific tables.

The following sections first discuss the background and structure of the WRD, and then describe the contents and structure of the tables in this report.

The Welfare Rules Database

The Welfare Rules Database is a comprehensive resource for comparing cash assistance programs across all 50 states and the District of Columbia, researching changes across time in cash assistance rules within a single state, or determining the rules governing cash assistance in one state at a point in time. The WRD is longitudinal and currently provides information on state Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) and TANF policies from 1996 through 2020. The WRD was initially developed in the mid-1990s to meet the needs of researchers under the Urban Institute’s Assessing the New Federalism project and was made publicly available in August 1999. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families (HHS/ACF) currently funds the maintenance and development of the WRD.

The Development of the WRD

The WRD was developed in response to the increasing difficulty since the early 1990s of tracking how states operate their cash assistance programs for needy families. Under AFDC, the structure of eligibility and benefit computation was mostly determined at the federal level. States were allowed to set certain policies—such as the standards used to establish eligibility and benefits, and the rules for two-parent families—but those choices were detailed in the State Plans submitted to HHS/ACF and in annual reports issued by HHS/ACF summarizing the State Plans. In the early to mid-1990s, as more states received waivers to experiment with welfare rules, it became increasingly difficult to research states’ policies. The waiver terms and conditions agreed to by the states and the federal government often did not provide full implementation details, and the implementation schedules often changed after the agreement was reached. The August 1996 passage of the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act (PRWORA), replacing AFDC with the TANF block grant, further increased both the degree of variation across state programs and the difficulty of tracking program rules. (The Deficit Reduction Act of 2005, which reauthorized the TANF program in 2006, modified work participation requirements and further altered state TANF policies.)

Currently, each state is required to submit a TANF State Plan to the federal government every two years. TANF State Plans provide an overview of states' choices under the block grant; however, the plans' level of detail varies considerably across states, and alone, the plans generally offer insufficient information to completely understand the details of eligibility, benefit computation, and client requirements. Furthermore, although states are expected to notify the federal government if any of their choices change after the plan is submitted, they are not required to do so.

The WRD provides detailed information about the extensive variation in states' policies, going beyond the level of detail in most states' official State Plans and capturing changes in policies that occur between the submissions of those plans. The WRD focuses on cash assistance policies and some closely tied transitional benefits; it does not attempt to capture other uses of federal TANF funds (such as state earned income tax credits and child care programs).

Although in general the Welfare Rules Database and Databook can be thought of as tracking TANF policies, the state cash assistance programs tracked by the WRD are not always exclusively funded with TANF dollars. Some states' cash assistance policies incorporate a separate state program (SSP), and other states use a solely state funded (SSF) program.⁶ States may choose to use different types of funding for families in different situations, although the materials used by caseworkers—which are generally the source materials for this project—do not typically indicate what funding is used in what circumstance. Thus, if a state funds benefits to two-parent units under an SSF program, or funds benefits to certain immigrant families under SSP funding, those benefits policies are included in the WRD to the extent they are described in the TANF caseworker materials, but the WRD does not separately identify which policies use SSP or SSF funds. This is particularly relevant for readers examining both the eligibility and benefit policies in the Databook and information on TANF spending or caseloads. The federal government's administrative data sources do capture information on SSP programs (it is usually shown separately from information on TANF programs); but information on SSF programs is not collected or disseminated by the federal government.

Sources of Information for the WRD, and Verification of the Data

The primary sources of information for the WRD (and thus for the tables in the Databook) are the caseworker manuals and regulations used in each state.⁷ The Urban Institute obtains the manuals or regulations for each state, as well as the ongoing updates to those manuals or regulations. These documents provide a consistent source of detailed information on policy changes and implementation dates across states and time.

After reviewing and coding the documents describing 2020 procedures, project staff conducted a verification process with the states. The draft 2020 tables were submitted to program administrators who were asked to identify incorrect information and to indicate where project staff could locate missing information not initially identified in the policy materials used for coding.⁸ The verification process occurred between March and June 2021.

Table 1 shows the extent to which each state’s data were reviewed. In most states (50 out of 51), a state contact reviewed the materials and all issues that were raised were fully resolved (shown as “fully verified” in the table below). In one state, we were able to verify some of the information in the tables but had outstanding questions after the verification period (shown as “partially verified”).

A similar verification process has been performed in each year since the first WRD Databook, which described policy variations in 1999. Portions of the 1996–98 data in the WRD have been verified against selected secondary sources but have not been fully reviewed by state TANF staff.

⁸ In most cases, adjustments to initial coding were made after documentation was obtained in the form of an updated policy or supplemental policy document. In the few cases where a particular policy was not documented in any written form, initial coding was adjusted based on discussion with the state contact.

Contents of the WRD

The WRD provides in-depth information on a wide range of policy topics. These topics are currently organized into 32 categories that together describe most significant dimensions of state policies regarding cash assistance to needy families. It is useful to consider the rules in the sequence in which individuals seeking and receiving assistance will likely encounter them. The 32 categories are listed below, organized into five sections, beginning with initial eligibility. (The organization of the tables in this report is similar to the organization of the database, but with slightly different categorizations.)

- I. Initial Eligibility
 - A. Does the state try to divert some families from becoming recipients?
 - Diversion
 - B. How does family composition or individual status affect eligibility?
 - Eligibility by Number/Type of Parents
 - Eligibility of Units Headed by a Minor Parent
 - Eligibility of Pregnant Women
 - Employment-Related Eligibility of Two-Parent Families
 - Eligibility of Individual Family Members
 - Inclusion of Noncitizens in the Unit
 - Treatment of Additional Adults in the Household⁹
 - Other Nonparent Caretaker Policies

⁹ Treatment of Additional Adults in the Household includes policies related to both financial and nonfinancial eligibility, as well as benefit computation. Therefore, the category could be included under sections I.A, I.D, and II.A.

- C. What level of assets can a family have and still be eligible?
 - Asset Test
- D. How is income counted in determining eligibility?
 - Countable Income¹⁰
 - Income and Assets of Children
 - In-Kind Income
 - Deemed Income
 - Child Support
 - Earned Income Disregards
- E. How much income can a family have and still be eligible?
 - Income Eligibility Tests
 - Dollar Amounts¹¹
- II. Benefits
 - A. If a family passes all eligibility tests, what is received?
 - Benefit Computation¹²
 - Benefit Issuance
- III. Activity Requirements
 - A. Once determined eligible, what must a recipient family do to maintain benefits?
 - Contracts and Agreements
 - School Policies for Dependent Children
 - Immunization and Health Screening Requirements
 - Child Support Sanctions¹³
 - B. What work activities are required?
 - Activities Exemptions
 - Activities Requirements
 - Activities Sanctions
 - Minor Parent Activities Requirements and Bonuses
 - Components

¹⁰ The treatment of unemployment income is included in appendix 2.

IV. Ongoing Eligibility and Transitional Benefits¹⁴

- A. What eligibility tests must recipient families pass for continuing eligibility?
- B. Are children eligible if born while the family receives benefits?
Family Cap
- C. How long can a family receive benefits?
Time Limits
- D. What happens after cash assistance ends?
Transitional Benefits

General Points about the WRD

In using the Databook and full database, it is helpful to keep in mind the following aspects of the WRD.

- The WRD contains information on the cash assistance rules in effect in each state across time. It does not include information on proposed legislation or on policies that have been agreed-upon but not yet implemented.
- The WRD focuses on the rules applied in determining families' eligibility, benefits, and requirements. The database does not contain information regarding caseloads, budgets, outcomes, or administrative practices.
- The database contains at least one "record" (a set of coded variables) for each state, time period, and category of rules.
- The database contains additional records when the state changes a policy or when the state's policy varies by geographic regions of the state, demographic characteristics of the assistance units, or "component" groups across the state. (The term "component" is used when the state's caseload is divided into mutually exclusive groups based on multiple characteristics. Appendix 1 provides additional information about components.)
- The WRD indicates when states vary policies either by sub-state regions or by county. When eligibility or benefit levels vary by sub-state regions, those amounts are generally captured for all regions. However, when policies vary at the county level, data are recorded only for the largest county in the state.¹⁵

¹⁴ The categories under sections I.B–I.E and II.A may also be relevant to ongoing eligibility. In most states, recipients are also required to pass nonfinancial and financial tests to continue receiving benefits. These tests may differ for initial and ongoing eligibility.

- The database contains for every time period, state, and category of rules one record designated the “majority rule” record. This record represents the policy that affected the majority of the caseload during the time period.

It is important to note that neither the WRD nor the Databook addresses the issue of how rules may be implemented in practice. As noted above, the WRD is based on caseworker manuals and regulations, which typically do not include information on the likelihood of various outcomes. For instance, if a particular type of recipient may be assigned to one of several work activities, the manuals do not typically address which activity is most likely to be assigned. Thus, for certain policies, two states may look similar in the database and yet in practice be different, and other states’ policies may look different and yet be similar in practice.

Policies in Response to the COVID-19 Pandemic

For most of 2020, the COVID-19 pandemic had profound impacts on many low-income families, while also creating challenges for the operation of benefit programs. Many parents lost employment, and both health and economic realities prevented individuals from seeking new jobs or engaging in other work-related activities. While there were no changes to federal TANF rules during 2020, most states used the program’s existing flexibility to modify their policies to better support families.¹⁶ The Databook captures policies that may have significantly impacted participants’ eligibility and benefits during the pandemic, including changes to job search and activity requirements, asset limits, time limits, and the treatment of certain income for eligibility and benefit computation.¹⁷

¹⁵ The states that allow counties to vary policies (that are included in this report) are California and Colorado. The largest counties in each state are Los Angeles County in California and Denver County in Colorado. The WRD provides additional information on states that allow counties to vary other policies (that are not included in this report).

Washington, DC: Office of Planning, Research, and Evaluation, Administration for Children and Families, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The tables in this report focus on the standard policies in each state as of July 1, 2020. If a state temporarily adopted new policies at some point during the year in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, we note these changes throughout the tables and report. In cases where a significant number of states made policy changes, we added additional columns to the tables to describe the COVID-19 policies.¹⁸ Also, because many states adopted policies in response to federal pandemic unemployment benefits, this report includes an additional table (appendix 2) to describe how states treated unemployment benefits. However, the policies described in this report are not an exhaustive list of states' COVID-19 changes. The Welfare Rules Database provides additional information on pandemic policies not captured in the Databook.

The Databook

The descriptions of the policies in this Databook are focused on what is relevant to the individuals and families to whom the policies apply. The report describes the rules that affect individuals and families in each state, but it generally does not specify whether those policies are imposed as a result of federal or state requirements. Thus, this report does not exhaustively describe federal requirements or prohibitions. Federal TANF policies are fully described in resources available from the Administration for Children and Families.¹⁹

The tables included in the Databook are designed to provide readers with easy access to key TANF policies across states as of July 1, 2020. The first four chapters of the Databook provide information across four broad policy areas: initial eligibility, benefits, requirements, and ongoing eligibility and transitional benefits. The Databook describes the standard policies as of July 1, 2020 and, when a state's policies varied in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, the policy is included if it occurred at any point during 2020. The last chapter provides longitudinal tables for selected policies with data from 1996 through 2020. In addition, appendix 2 provides information on the treatment of unemployment income provided through federal pandemic programs. Appendix 3 lists the changes in state policies between the 2019 and 2020 tables.

The data for the tables are extracted from the WRD and represent only a portion of the information in the database. Even for the policy areas addressed in this report, further details are available online in the WRD. In general, the Databook tables focus on the "majority rule" for an aspect of policy, while the full online database allows exploration of policy variations across months of the year and different subsets of the caseload.²⁰

Each table follows the same general structure. Typically, the body of each table includes one row per state, which represents the policies in place as of July 1, 2020. If different policies were used for different types of families, the tables show the policies for the predominant type of family receiving TANF in the state—generally, single-parent units with children. If a state’s policies in a category vary by geographic area, the policies for the largest area in the state are shown. In some cases, tables include additional columns to describe the COVID-19 policies at any point during 2020.

Some tables include more information than just the rules for the majority of the caseload. In some cases, additional information is included in an additional row for the state; in other cases, additional information is included in footnotes.

- Additional data as a second row: A second row is added to the body of the table if a state divides its entire caseload into mutually exclusive groups that are treated differently across more than one policy. These groups—called “components” in the WRD—are usually defined by more than one characteristic, such as units either meeting any one of a number of work-exemption criteria or not meeting any of those criteria. Descriptions of states’ components are located in appendix 1.
- Additional data as a footnote: Several types of variations may appear as footnotes in the tables. These include variation by type of assistance unit (two-parent units versus one-parent units, or applicants versus recipients) or geographic areas. These types of policies are footnoted in some, but not all, tables. The tables do not capture all the variation in policies across regions and types of units, but the full database contains this information. In addition, states with county variations in policy are footnoted. The footnote indicates the name of the county (the largest in population in the state) to which the policy applies.

Each 2020 table is numbered by chapter and section. For example, table III.A.1 refers to the first table in chapter III, section A. The longitudinal tables are numbered L1 through L10. With the exception of the additions to capture COVID-19 policy changes, the tables in this report and their numbering are the same as in the Databook describing the July 2019 policies.

²⁰ In the tables regarding eligibility and benefits, states with sub-state variation in the dollar amounts used for eligibility or benefit standards are denoted.

I. Initial Eligibility

The tables in this chapter of the Databook describe key aspects of the rules imposed on families and individuals to determine initial eligibility for TANF cash assistance as of July 1, 2020. Rules for initial eligibility apply to individuals who are applying for the first time or who are reapplying for assistance after a period of not receiving assistance. To be eligible, an applicant family must pass both nonfinancial tests, based on the characteristics of the family and its members, and financial tests, based on the income and asset holdings available to the family. This chapter is divided into five sections covering initial eligibility rules related to diversion, family composition, assets, income definitions, and income tests.

A. Does the state try to divert some families from becoming recipients?

Many states have policies that attempt to divert from assistance applicants who may be able to achieve economic stability with some type of government assistance other than regular monthly cash aid. These types of policies were developed during the 1990s, first under state waivers and then after the passage of PRWORA. Some states use a formal diversion program (described below), while others require job search at application, and some states use both approaches.

Formal Diversion Payments (Table I.A.1)

Under formal diversion programs, families may choose to receive a lump-sum cash payment to address immediate needs instead of receiving a monthly TANF benefit. Generally, states provide benefits to families to alleviate short-term problems that interfere with either keeping or finding employment. Many states require recipients of diversion assistance to be currently employed or seeking employment. Families that accept diversion payments typically are barred from applying for monthly TANF benefits for some period, but the period of ineligibility may be reduced by approaches such as deducting a portion of the diversion payment from future TANF benefits. Most diversion programs are voluntary; however, states may require certain families to enroll in a diversion program and participate in job search or job-related activities before applying for monthly TANF benefits.

For the purposes of the WRD, a formal diversion program is defined as diverting eligible applicants or recipients from ongoing TANF receipt by providing a lump-sum cash payment directly to the family or to a vendor for expenses incurred by the family. Other strategies states may use to divert applicants from ongoing receipt of cash benefits (such as requiring an applicant to participate in job search or resource and referral services) are not identified as formal diversion programs in the WRD.

The maximum diversion payment is either a flat payment, regardless of the family's size and the state's maximum benefit (represented in table I.A.1 by a dollar amount), or a multiple of the maximum benefit the family would have received in monthly TANF benefits (represented in the table by a number of months of benefits). If the state provides diversion payments based on a multiple of the maximum monthly benefit, the amount will vary by the family size and the level of the state's maximum benefits.

Table I.A.1 describes whether a state provides a diversion payment, the maximum payment, the form of the payment, how often a recipient may receive the maximum payment, the period of TANF ineligibility after receiving a diversion payment, and whether the months that a family is diverted count toward the state's time limit. Highlights for 2020 include:

- Thirty-three states have formal diversion programs.
- Of the states with formal diversion programs, nine states provide families the same diversion payment regardless of the family's size. These payments range from $1,000 in Florida, Kansas, and Texas to $2,500 in Colorado. An additional two states provide families a fixed amount that depends on the family's size. For a family of three, these payments range from $750 in New Jersey to $1,500 in New Mexico.
- Seventeen states pay diverted families an amount equal to a multiple of the maximum monthly benefit for the family's size; the multiple ranges from 1 to 12, but is most commonly 3 times the maximum benefit. Additionally, California pays the greater of $2,000 or three times the maximum aid payment for the family size, and Virginia pays the lesser of $1,500 or four times the maximum benefit for the family size.
- Among the states with diversion programs, six count the payments toward the TANF time limit in some or all cases.

Families applying for a diversion payment must still be eligible for assistance using the state's eligibility rules (see sections I.B–I.E). The rules generally are the same for families that apply for diversion and those that apply for monthly assistance.

Related tables: For information on diversion programs for selected years between 1996 and 2020, see table L1.

Mandatory Job Search at Application (Table I.A.2)

In states requiring job search at application, applicants must look for jobs either before or while their applications are processed. To be eligible for aid, applicants must prove they have searched for jobs at a set number of businesses or participated in the state’s job-related programs. The goal of these requirements is for applicants to find jobs and no longer need assistance, or at least be employed by the time they begin receiving assistance. States may exempt some applicants from searching for a job at the time of application. Exempt groups often include applicants who are ill or incapacitated, caring for someone who is ill or incapacitated, over a certain age, or pregnant. During the COVID-19 pandemic, some states temporarily suspended job search requirements for all applicants.²¹

Table I.A.2 indicates which states require applicants to search for a job at application as a condition of eligibility, what kinds of activities are required, who is exempt from the activities, and what happens to individuals who do not comply with the requirement under standard policies. Findings for 2020 include:

- Seventeen states require the applicant to seek employment either before or while the application is processed.
- Of the states that require job search, 15 may deny the application if the individual fails to meet the job search requirements.

B. How does family composition or individual status affect eligibility?

To be eligible for either a diversion payment or monthly benefits, a family must pass several nonfinancial tests based on the demographic characteristics of the overall family or individuals within the family. Families generally include at least one eligible child, but states may also allow TANF eligibility for pregnant women with no other children. States vary in whether they allow

TANF for children living with caretakers who are not relatives; further, some states do not offer TANF to families that include two nondisabled parents.

When a family passes a state’s initial tests, the next step in the eligibility process is to determine what many states refer to as the “assistance unit”—the group of people whose needs are considered in establishing the benefit. The definition of the assistance unit can have substantial implications for a unit’s eligibility. In states that increase eligibility limits with unit size, a larger assistance unit might increase the family’s chance of eligibility. In some cases, however, including an individual in the unit and including his or her income in the unit’s countable income might lower the chance of eligibility. In most states, the size of the assistance unit also determines the maximum benefit that will be paid.

In general terms, the assistance unit consists of the dependent children and their parents—including any parents in the household, even if those parents are not married. However, states vary in the treatment of stepparents, noncitizen parents, a parent’s nonparent partner, and parents and children who receive benefits from the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program. When the only adults in the family are prohibited from being in the assistance unit (due to immigrant status, receipt of SSI, certain time limits or sanctions, or nonparent caretaker status in some states and circumstances), or when they choose not to be in the unit (nonparent caretakers in other states and circumstances), a “child-only” assistance unit is formed.²²

Eligibility of Pregnant Women with No Other Children (Table I.B.1)

At the most basic level, to be eligible for TANF, the family must include a child or, in some states, a pregnant woman. Table I.B.1 indicates whether units with pregnant women who have no other children are eligible to receive TANF cash assistance. The table also indicates whether the father and unborn child are also eligible for benefits—usually meaning they are included in the assistance unit. For states that provide TANF benefits to pregnant women with no other children, the table also provides the month of pregnancy in which benefits may begin. Key findings for 2020 include:

- In cases when a woman is pregnant but has no other children, 32 states consider her potentially eligible for benefits for at least a portion of her pregnancy.

²² In some states, reaching a time limit results in removing the needs of the adult from the assistance unit.

- Among the states that allow eligibility for a pregnant woman with no other children, ten states also consider the father eligible, and one state counts the unborn child in the size of the assistance unit.

Eligibility Rules for Two-Parent, Nondisabled Applicant Units (Table I.B.2)

Some states have different eligibility rules for families that include two parents—either married or unmarried—compared with families with one parent or no parents. If the family includes two parents, and neither parent has a disability, the family is ineligible for TANF in some states. In other states, a family with two nondisabled parents must pass additional eligibility tests (not imposed on other families) based on the parents’ current or prior labor force status.²³

The additional requirements imposed on two-parent families may include an “hours test,” a work history test, or a waiting period. Under an hours test, the unit is ineligible if the parent who is the principal wage earner is working more than a specified number of hours per month.²⁴ States may apply this rule when determining the initial or continuing eligibility of two-parent families. Under a work history test, the eligibility of two-parent units is restricted to those in which the principal wage earner worked during a certain number of calendar quarters over a specified number of years, or in which the principal wage earner satisfies other criteria related to labor force attachment.²⁵ Waiting periods restrict the eligibility of two-parent families until a certain number of days or weeks after the family would otherwise have been eligible.²⁶ For example, under a 30-day waiting period, if the principal wage earner becomes unemployed and the family would not have been eligible when the parent was working, the family would not become eligible to apply for assistance until one month after the parent loses his or her job.

Table I.B.2 presents the eligibility rules for families with two nondisabled parents at application. Highlights for 2020 include:

- Three states (Louisiana, New Hampshire, and North Dakota) do not allow two-parent families in which neither parent has a disability to receive TANF.
- In six states, two-parent families are potentially eligible, but face additional tests not imposed on single-parent families (i.e., a work hours test, work history test, or application waiting period).

Related tables: For information about the hours test for two-parent nondisabled families who are already receiving benefits (as compared to those who are applying for benefits), see table IV.A.1. Table L2 provides information on the rules for two-parent units in selected years from 1996 through 2020.

Special Rules Imposed on Minor Parent Eligibility (Table I.B.3)

Parents who are teenagers may or may not be eligible to receive a benefit on their own, and in most cases, they are eligible only if they are living with their parents or in another state-approved setting.²⁷ Table I.B.3 describes special eligibility rules for families in which the parent is a minor (usually defined as under age 18 and never married). The first column indicates whether a minor parent can ever head a TANF unit and receive the benefit in his or her own name. The second column indicates whether the state requires the minor parent to live with a parent or in another state-approved setting (referred to in the table as a living arrangement restriction). Findings from the 2020 data include:

- Forty-one states allow minor parents to apply for TANF as the head of a unit.
- Two states (Hawaii and Nebraska) do not require the minor parent to live with a guardian or in an approved setting.²⁸

Related table: Table I.D.1 provides information on the treatment of the grandparents' income in cases when a minor parent is living with one or both of his or her parents and also heading his or her own assistance unit.

²⁷ In general, states may not provide federally-funded assistance to minor parents who are not living in an adult-supervised setting. However, there are some exceptions to this requirement.

²⁸ Benefits for assistance units that do not qualify for federal funding are provided with state funding.

Inclusion of Stepparents in the Assistance Unit (Table I.B.4)

State rules vary for whether a stepparent (i.e., a person who has married the child's biological/adoptive parent, but who has not legally adopted the child) is included in the assistance unit. Stepparents may be required to be part of the unit, may be prohibited from being part of the unit, or may be included in the unit at the option of the family. Table I.B.4 focuses on rules for stepparents who have no child in common with their spouses, have no biological children of their own in the assistance unit, are living in the home, and are not incapacitated. (State rules for stepparents not meeting these criteria may vary and are addressed in further detail in the WRD.) Policy highlights from 2020 include:

- Twenty-one states require that stepparents be included in the assistance unit.
- Thirteen states allow the unit head to choose whether to include the stepparent.
- Seventeen states prohibit the stepparent from being included in the assistance unit.

Related table: Information about the treatment of income from a stepparent who is not included in the assistance unit can be found in table I.D.2.

Eligibility of Noncitizens (Tables I.B.5, I.B.6, and I.B.7)

If a family is potentially eligible for aid, but one or more members of the family are not citizens, complex rules govern whether the noncitizens can be included in an assistance unit. The eligibility of noncitizens depends on several factors, including when they arrived in the United States, how long they have resided here, the specific status that allows them to be in the United States (e.g., lawful permanent resident, refugee, etc.), and the extent to which they have worked since arriving. The federal rules require that some groups of noncitizens be considered potentially eligible for TANF in all states, but states retain wide discretion regarding the eligibility of most noncitizens.

Under the AFDC program, the only noncitizens categorically ineligible for aid were unauthorized immigrants and noncitizens in the country temporarily (under student visas or temporary work visas). Further, the income of a legal immigrant's sponsor could be treated as available to the immigrant (a process known as "deeming") for a limited time; however, most legal immigrants were potentially eligible for benefits.

After the passage of PRWORA, noncitizens' access to federal TANF benefits was significantly restricted. PRWORA created the "qualified alien" distinction, which more narrowly defined the group of noncitizens potentially eligible for most federally-funded TANF assistance.²⁹ The federal law also extended sponsor deeming and further limited qualified aliens' access to assistance based on their date of entry into the country. Qualified aliens who entered the United States before August 22, 1996 (the date PRWORA was passed), are potentially eligible for federally-funded assistance without any waiting period, whereas most qualified aliens who arrived in the country on or after August 22, 1996 are subject to a five-year bar on federal TANF assistance.³⁰ After the five-year bar, qualified aliens are again potentially eligible for federally-funded TANF assistance.

Some immigrants are exempt from the various restrictions, and must be potentially eligible for TANF. Refugees and asylees must be considered potentially eligible in all states for their first five years in the country. Also, military personnel and veterans and their families can never be denied eligibility due to their immigrant status (regardless of how long they have been in the country).³¹ Finally, noncitizens who arrived in the United States prior to the passage of PRWORA who have accumulated 40 quarters of work history cannot be denied TANF eligibility due to their immigrant status in any state.³²

³⁰ The five-year bar applies only to those qualified aliens who entered the United States—whether legally or illegally—on or after August 22, 1996. Therefore, a person may have entered illegally in 1994 and become a lawful permanent resident in 2000. As long as that person has been continuously present in the United States, the bar would not apply to him or her. See the Department of Justice's Interim Guidance on Verification of Citizenship, Qualified Alien Status and Eligibility under Title IV of PRWORA at 62 Federal Regulation 61415 (November 17, 1997). Further, if the noncitizen enters the United States on or after August 22, 1996, but is not qualified when he or she enters, the five-year clock begins on the date his or her immigrant status becomes qualified.

³¹ States must permit the following qualified aliens who meet the state's eligibility criteria to receive TANF benefits for five years after the date of entry into the United States or the date asylum or withholding of deportation was granted: refugees (and victims of severe forms of trafficking and certain family members), asylees, noncitizens whose deportation has been withheld, Amerasians, and Cuban/Haitian entrants. Also, states may never deny eligibility to veterans or individuals on active duty along with their spouses and unmarried dependent children. Under the 2008 Consolidated Appropriations Act (P.L. 110-161, § 101(a)(27)) and the 2008 National Defense Authorization Act (P.L. 110-181, § 8120(b)), Iraqi and Afghani immigrants gained special status and became eligible to receive benefits available to refugees, including resettlement assistance and access to other public benefit programs. The Afghani and Iraqi special immigrants, while eligible for a time-limited exemption, are still otherwise subject to the federal five-year bar on benefit assistance. Afghani special immigrants became eligible for a six-month time-limited exemption from the federal five-year bar, while Iraqi special immigrants became eligible for an eight-month time-limited exemption from the federal five-year bar. The time-limited exemption from the federal five-year bar begins on the date the noncitizen enters the United States.

Although federal law determines which noncitizens are potentially eligible for federally-funded benefits and the periods in which they may be eligible, states have substantial flexibility. States can choose to provide or deny assistance to certain groups of noncitizens the federal government has indicated are potentially eligible for federally-funded benefits. States can also provide state-funded assistance to certain noncitizens ineligible for federally-funded assistance, such as qualified aliens during the five-year bar or certain noncitizens who do not meet the “qualified aliens” definition.³³

States have made three types of decisions about the eligibility of noncitizens:

1. Will some or all qualified aliens who arrived before PRWORA (pre-PRWORA) be eligible for benefits?
2. Will some or all noncitizens who arrived on or after the date of the PRWORA legislation (post-PRWORA) be eligible for benefits during the five-year bar?
3. Will some or all post-PRWORA noncitizens be eligible for benefits after the five-year bar?

Tables I.B.5, I.B.6, and I.B.7 describe the variation in state policies concerning pre-PRWORA and post-PRWORA noncitizens.³⁴

Table I.B.5 describes selected state policies regarding pre-PRWORA qualified noncitizens who are potentially eligible for federally-funded assistance, but who do not fall into groups required to be covered (in other words, they are “nonexempt”). Since PRWORA was passed more than 20 years prior to the policies covered by this Databook, the policies regarding pre-PRWORA entrants do not affect a large number of applicants; however, there are still some families applying for TANF in which the adults entered the country prior to August 1996 and have not obtained citizenship. The table provides eligibility rules for two groups of pre-PRWORA noncitizens—lawful permanent residents and asylees.³⁵ As mentioned above, even if a state

³³ Two groups of nonqualified aliens—those who are in the country on a temporary basis (student visas, work visas, and so on) and those who are in the country without authorization—are not eligible for benefits in any state. However, there are other groups of nonqualified aliens, such as persons residing under color of law (PRUCOL), who are eligible in some states.

³⁴ These state rules must be viewed in the context of the federal prohibitions and requirements affecting the eligibility of noncitizens for federally funded assistance. The eligibility rules for noncitizens are very complex. This discussion is a summary intended for researchers and should not be used for assessing the policy options available to a state under federal law or whether a state’s policies fully comport with federal law.

does not provide assistance to all pre-PRWORA qualified aliens, those qualifying for special exceptions based on work history (having accumulated 40 quarters) or veteran or military status are still potentially eligible for federally-funded benefits in all states.

Highlights from the 2020 data include:

- Forty-nine states consider all pre-PRWORA qualified aliens who are lawful permanent residents eligible for assistance.
- Forty-nine states consider all pre-PRWORA qualified aliens who are asylees eligible for assistance.
- One state (Mississippi) does not consider any pre-PRWORA lawful permanent residents or asylees eligible for assistance (with the exception of those who must be considered potentially eligible based on federal rules).

Table I.B.6 shows whether states use their own funding to provide assistance to post-PRWORA noncitizens who are ineligible for federal TANF assistance. The first three columns of the table focus on three groups of qualified noncitizens during their first five years, when they are ineligible for federally-funded TANF due to the five-year bar (unless they qualify for a military or veteran exemption). The three groups of qualified noncitizens shown in the table are lawful permanent residents, parolees, and people who meet the specific definition of “battered non-citizen.” (Several other groups of qualified aliens—including refugees, asylees, and people with deportation withheld—are not shown in this table because they must be considered potentially eligible for federally-funded TANF in every state during their first five years.) The last column of the table describes whether any nonqualified aliens, other than those who are temporary or unauthorized, are potentially eligible for benefits using state funds. Key policies for 2020 include:

- Thirteen states fund benefits for all qualified aliens in each of the three categories shown in the table (lawful permanent residents, parolees, and battered noncitizens) during their first five years.
- Nine states fund benefits for at least some nonqualified aliens.

Table I.B.7 shows whether post-PRWORA noncitizens are eligible for assistance after they have resided in the United States with qualified alien status for at least five years. After the five-year bar, qualified aliens may be provided with TANF using federal funds, but the state is not required to provide aid. The table provides eligibility rules for several categories of qualified aliens: lawful permanent residents, asylees/refugees, noncitizens with deportation withheld, noncitizens paroled in the country for at least one year, and battered noncitizens. Even if a state does not provide assistance to all qualified aliens following the five-year bar, those qualifying for special exceptions based on veteran or military status are still eligible for federally-funded benefits in all states. Further, some states provide aid only to some subgroups, for example only those who have attained 40 quarters of work history. Policies from 2020 include:

- Forty-four states consider all post-PRWORA qualified aliens who are lawful permanent residents and who are beyond the five-year bar to be potentially eligible for assistance.
- Five states only consider a lawful permanent resident past the five-year bar to be potentially eligible for assistance if that person can be credited with 40 quarters of work (or if federal rules require eligibility based on military or veteran status).
- Forty-two states consider all post-PRWORA qualified aliens who are past the five-year bar and fall into any of the other four groups shown in the table—asylees/refugees, deportees, parolees, or battered non-citizens—to be potentially eligible for assistance.
- For post-PRWORA qualified aliens who are past the five-year bar and fall into any of the other four groups shown in the table—asylees/refugees, deportees, parolees, or battered non-citizens—four states do not provide any eligibility (unless federal rules require eligibility based on military or veteran status).

Two points are important to note for all three tables concerning the treatment of noncitizens. First, even if a state will potentially fund cash aid to an immigrant in a particular circumstance, that immigrant might still be ineligible if the immigrant has a sponsor whose income is deemed available for the immigrant’s support. Policies related to sponsor deeming are not shown in the tables but are included in the WRD. Second, all noncitizen rules discussed here apply to individuals, not to entire families. Within a family, some individuals may be ineligible based on immigrant status, while others may remain eligible.

Related table: Information about the treatment of income from immigrant parents who are not eligible to be in the assistance unit can be found in table I.D.4.

Treatment of Non-Caretaker Adults in Household (Table I.B.8)

When a child’s household includes adults who are neither the child’s parents nor caretakers, state rules vary on whether those non-caretaker adults may be considered to be members of the assistance unit. For the purposes of the WRD, a non-caretaker adult is defined as an adult living in the household who is neither the primary caretaker of the children nor a stepparent or parent of any children in the household. A non-caretaker adult could be an adult who is related to the parent or children (for instance, the children’s aunt), the unmarried partner of the parent, or a friend of the parent who is not a relative or in a relationship with the parent. Table I.B.8 describes whether these individuals are eligible to be included in the TANF unit.

Additionally, the table provides information about how states count income and calculate benefits when these individuals are not included in the assistance unit. The table also details whether shared living costs affect eligibility or benefits. Key policies from 2020 include:

- Thirty-three states always exclude all non-caretaker adults in the household from the assistance unit.
- Five states (Hawaii, New York, Oregon, Vermont, and Virginia) potentially allow any adult in the household to be included in the unit.

Eligibility Requirements for Children (Table I.B.9)

States define the maximum age of a child for purposes of TANF and may require that a child lives with either a parent or another relative to be potentially eligible for TANF. Table I.B.9 addresses these basic criteria for determining the potential eligibility of a family (as opposed to individuals within the family). The first two columns of the table show the maximum age at which a child can be TANF-eligible; the first column provides the maximum age for children who are not in school, and the second column gives the maximum that applies for children who are still enrolled in school. The last column of table I.B.9 addresses a second issue related to overall family eligibility—whether a child whose caretaker is a nonrelative is potentially eligible for TANF.³⁶ Policies from 2020 include:

- A teenager who is not attending school is still considered a child for purposes of TANF through age 17 (until reaching his or her 18th birthday) in 48 states, and through age 15 in D.C. In addition, Michigan and Virginia require all school-age children to be in school full-time as a condition of eligibility for either the child (in Virginia) or the entire family (in Michigan).
- In 47 states, the maximum age to be considered a child for purposes of TANF is slightly higher (generally through age 18) for those who are attending school.

³⁶ AFDC did not cover children with nonrelative caretakers.

- Nineteen states consider children living with nonrelative caretakers potentially eligible for TANF.

Inclusion of SSI Recipients in the Assistance Unit (Table I.B.10)

States also vary in the treatment of parents and children who receive benefits from the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program. SSI provides cash aid to low-income individuals who are age 65 or over and low-income individuals under age 65—including children—who are determined by the program to have a disability. Table I.B.10 shows whether SSI recipients are included in the TANF assistance unit and when counted in the unit, how their income is treated. SSI benefits are typically higher than TANF benefits, so including an SSI recipient in the unit and counting his or her SSI income might reduce a family's likelihood of eligibility. Highlights for 2020 include:

- Five states (Alaska, Idaho, New Hampshire, West Virginia, and Wisconsin) include SSI recipients in the TANF assistance unit. New Hampshire and Wisconsin include both child and adult SSI recipients, whereas Idaho includes adult SSI recipients, and Alaska and West Virginia include SSI recipients who are children.

Related table: For additional detail about SSI recipients, table II.A.5 gives the maximum benefit paid to a child-only TANF case with one child when the parents are excluded from the assistance unit due to SSI receipt.

Inclusion of Nonparent Caretakers in the Assistance Unit (Table I.B.11)

Many children live with caretakers who are not their parents—often a grandparent or another relative. Nonparent caretakers may or may not be considered part of the TANF assistance unit, depending on their characteristics and, in some cases, their own choice. Being included in the unit could increase the TANF benefit (depending on the caretaker's income), but it could also lead to additional requirements that would not be placed on a child-only unit (a unit with no adults counted in the assistance unit) related to time limits and work requirements.

Table I.B.11 shows the state policies regarding nonparent caretakers. The first four columns of the table address whether nonparent caretakers are included in the unit, and under what circumstances caretakers are included when inclusion is optional. The final column of the table provides information as to whether a caretaker's spouse is included in the unit when the caretaker is included. This column is relevant in the situation when a child's caretakers are a married couple—for example, the child’s grandmother and grandfather. Key policies from 2020 include:

- Four states never allow nonparent caretakers to be included in the assistance unit.
- Twenty-four states allow nonparent caretakers to choose whether to be included in the assistance unit.
- Twenty-one states allow for the inclusion of some nonparent caretakers (e.g., those with lower incomes, or those who are relatives), but do not allow others to be included in the unit.
- Of the remaining two states, New Jersey requires the inclusion of some nonparent caretakers and does not allow others to be included in the unit, and North Dakota requires the inclusion of some nonparent caretakers, allows for the inclusion of other nonparent caretakers, and does not allow others to be included in the unit.

Related tables: For additional information about cases with nonparent caretakers, see table I.B.9 for whether the state ever provides TANF to a child living with a caretaker who is not a relative. Additionally, table I.D.3 describes the treatment of the income and assets of nonparent caretakers, table II.A.5 gives the maximum benefits paid to child-only units with a single child living with a nonparent caretaker, and table III.B.4 describes work-related activity requirements for nonparent caretakers.

C. What level of assets can a family have and still be eligible?

If the family passes the nonfinancial eligibility tests, the next step in determining TANF eligibility may be an asset test. Most states restrict the amount of assets a family may hold and still be eligible for assistance; however, these amounts vary greatly by state and by type of asset. If the family’s total assets exceed the amounts established by the state, the family is ineligible for assistance. In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, states may have temporarily increased or eliminated these limits.³⁷

³⁷ For more information about states’ policies in response to the pandemic, see Shantz, Katie, Linda Giannarelli, Ilham Dehry, Sarah Knowles, and Sarah Minton (2022). “State TANF Policies During the COVID-19 Pandemic” OPRE Report 2021-233. Washington, DC: Office of Planning, Research, and Evaluation, Administration for Children and Families, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Asset Limits for Applicants (Table I.C.1)

States determine the maximum value of assets—including vehicles—an applicant family may hold and still remain eligible for benefits. Table I.C.1 describes each state’s asset tests for applicants. The first column of the table provides the limit on the value of countable assets a family may hold and still be eligible for assistance. The second column describes whether some or all of the value of a vehicle is excluded in determining the amount of a family’s assets for eligibility purposes; any portion not excluded is counted as part of the family’s total asset value, which is then compared to the asset limit. When a portion of the vehicle’s value is exempted, the value may be given in terms of equity or fair-market value. The fair-market value is the amount for which the vehicle could be sold, while the equity value is the fair-market value minus any amount still owed on the vehicle. When a family still owes money on a vehicle, the equity value will be less than the fair-market value, so this distinction is important when comparing vehicle exemption amounts across states. Standard policy highlights for 2020 include:

- Forty-three states have asset limits for applicants.
- In states with asset tests, the limits range from $1,000 in eight states to $15,000 in Michigan.

Related tables: Asset limits may be different for determining the initial eligibility of applicants compared to the continuing eligibility of recipients. For information on the asset test for recipients, see table IV.A.3. Tables L8 and L9 provide information on asset limits for recipients and the vehicle exemption for recipients, respectively, for selected years from 1996 through 2020.

D. How is income counted in determining eligibility?

Once a family has passed any asset test imposed by the state, the family’s available income is computed for eligibility purposes. States have discretion in determining what portion and types of earned and unearned income are counted, in addition to whose income is counted, for eligibility purposes.³⁸ In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, the federal government instituted special pandemic unemployment programs that increased the availability of unemployment aid as well as the benefit amounts, and states could determine whether to count the additional unemployment assistance when determining income eligibility and benefit computation. These policies are captured in appendix 2.³⁹

Generally, if a person is considered part of the assistance unit, his or her earned and unearned income is counted as part of the unit's total (gross) income. Many states also count a portion of or all income from certain individuals who are not part of the assistance unit but who have an obligation to support a member of the assistance unit. Typically, states view a portion of the income of these individuals as being required for their own needs; they "allocate" that portion to the individual and any remaining income is deemed available to the assistance unit as unearned income. This income may or may not actually be available to the unit, but the state assumes the individual bears some financial responsibility and therefore requires that a portion of the individual's income count as income of the unit. In particular, when a stepparent or a grandparent (the parent of a minor parent) lives in the same home as the applicant but is not considered part of the assistance unit, a portion of that person's income is sometimes counted as part of the applicant's income for eligibility and benefit computation purposes. Other groups of individuals whose income may receive special treatment are nonparent caretakers and immigrant parents who are members of the household but not included in the assistance unit.

Treatment of Grandparent Income (Table I.D.1)

When a minor parent is potentially eligible to head his or her own assistance unit, a portion of his or her parents' income may be deemed available to the minor's unit when determining eligibility and benefits. When the grandparents' (the parents of the minor parent) income is deemed available to the unit, the state may allow grandparents to disregard a portion of their earned income, similar to the earned income disregards available to applicants. States may also allow for an additional disregard approximating the amount of the grandparents' basic needs and the needs of their dependents outside the TANF assistance unit. The remaining income is deemed available to the minor parent's TANF unit and is counted as unearned income for eligibility and benefit computation purposes.

Table I.D.1 describes the treatment of grandparent income for applicants. The first column indicates if the state deems income in this situation, the second column indicates the initial earned income disregard available to the grandparents, and the third column describes any other disregards available to the grandparents (which are most often disregards approximating the grandparents' basic needs). The table also indicates the income standards used by states to determine any needs-based disregard. Key policies from 2020 include:

- Thirty-eight states require a portion of the grandparent's income be deemed available to the minor parent.
- Three states (Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Vermont) do not require deeming of income from the grandparent.
- In the remaining 10 states, there is no policy regarding deeming since the minor parent is included in an assistance unit with the grandparent (the minor parent's adult parent).

Information pertaining to disregards for child support payments for dependents outside the home or alimony is not captured in the table, but can be found in the WRD.

Related tables: See table I.E.3 (Standards for Estimating Eligibility) to determine the income standards listed in the final column for a family of three. For more information about minor parents, see table I.B.3, which describes whether minor parents are potentially eligible to head their own TANF units.

Treatment of Stepparent Income (Table I.D.2)

In states where a stepparent is either always excluded from the assistance unit or given the option to be excluded from the assistance unit, a portion of the stepparent's income may be deemed available to the unit. As with their policies for grandparent deeming, states generally allow the stepparent to disregard a portion of his or her earned income, similar to the earned income disregards available to applicants. States may also allow the stepparent to subtract from his or her income a second disregard approximating the amount of his or her basic needs and the needs of his or her dependents outside the TANF assistance unit. The remaining income after these disregards is deemed available to the stepparent's spouse and the spouse's dependents and is counted as unearned income for eligibility and benefit computation purposes.

Table I.D.2 describes the deeming process for stepparents' income. The first column indicates if the state deems income, the second column indicates the initial earned income disregard available to the stepparent, and the third column describes any other disregards available to the stepparent (which are most often needs-based disregards). The table also indicates the income standards used by states to determine any needs-based disregard. Policy highlights for 2020 include:

- Twenty-nine states require that some of the stepparent's income be deemed to the unit.
- D.C. does not require deeming of income from the stepparents.
- In the remaining 21 states, there is no policy regarding deeming since the stepparents must be included in the unit.

As noted for table I.D.1, information pertaining to disregards for child support payments for dependents outside the home or alimony is not captured in the table, but can be found in the WRD.

Related tables: See table I.E.3 (Standards for Estimating Eligibility) to determine the income standards listed in the final column for a family of three. For additional information on whether stepparents are potentially eligible to be included in the assistance unit, see table I.B.4.

Treatment of Income and Assets of Nonparent Caretakers (Table I.D.3)

In general, the treatment of a nonparent caretaker's income and assets depends on whether that person is included in the assistance unit. Typically, if the caretaker is included in the unit, then his or her income and assets are counted; if the caretaker is not included in the unit, then his or her income and assets are not counted. This means that a "child only" unit (composed of a child living with a nonparent caretaker who is not counted in the unit) often has a countable income of $0. However, states may establish different policies, such as treating income differently for eligibility determination versus benefit computation. Table I.D.3 describes the state policies regarding the income of nonparent caretakers. Key highlights from the 2020 data include:

- For caretakers who are not in the assistance unit, three states (Arizona, Nevada, and Texas) include at least a portion of their income for eligibility and/or benefit computation.
- All 47 states that include at least some caretakers in the assistance unit count at least a portion of the included caretaker's income for eligibility and benefit calculations.

Related table: For information on whether nonparent caretakers are included in the assistance unit, see table I.B.11.

Treatment of Income of Parents Excluded from the Assistance Unit Due to Immigrant Status (Table I.D.4)

In many cases, the restrictions placed on immigrants' eligibility for TANF (see Tables I.B.5 through I.B.7) result in a parent not being eligible to be in the assistance unit, while one or more children are potentially eligible. For example, in the case of two lawful permanent residents who have been in the United States for three years, and who have a baby who was born in the United States, the baby is potentially eligible for TANF (because he or she is a citizen) while the parents are still within the five-year bar, and therefore ineligible in many states. In all cases when a parent is in the household but is not included in the assistance unit, either all or a portion of the parent's income is considered available to the potentially-eligible children for purposes of determining their eligibility and benefits. As with grandparent and stepparent deeming, states often allow the immigrant parent to disregard a portion of his or her earned income, similar to the earned income disregards available to applicants. States may also allow additional disregards, and some states only count a prorated portion of the parent's income.

Table I.D.4 describes state policies that apply to units in which a child has a parent who is living in the household but not eligible to be part of the assistance unit due to immigrant status. The first column indicates if the state deems income from immigrant parents in this situation, the second column shows the initial earned income disregards available to the immigrant parent, the third column reflects any additional income disregards provided, and the fourth column conveys the computation methods used in determining both eligibility and benefits. Key highlights from the 2020 data include:

- Four states deem all the excluded parent's income available to the unit for both eligibility and benefit calculations.
- In 46 states, some portion of the ineligible immigrant parent's income is disregarded, with different disregards sometimes used for eligibility determination and for benefit computation.
- A large majority of states (47) utilize the "standard" method of computation—adding deemed income to the unit's other income, and then performing the eligibility and benefit computations with the unit size of the eligible members. Other states use other formulas. California and Montana, for example, compute eligibility and benefit using the family size that includes the family members who are ineligible due to immigrant status, but cap the benefit at the maximum payment for the family size that includes only the eligible members. Oregon also computes eligibility using the unit size that includes family members who are ineligible, but computes the benefit using the unit size that only includes eligible members.

- One state—Wisconsin—does not allow eligibility for families in which a parent in the household is excluded due to immigrant status.

Related tables: Tables I.B.5, I.B.6, and I.B.7 describe the variation in state policies concerning the eligibility of pre-PRWORA and post-PRWORA noncitizens.

E. How much income can a family have and still be eligible?

To determine initial eligibility for benefits, many states use income eligibility tests—that is, tests that compare the unit’s gross or net income amount to a specified income threshold. If the applicant’s countable income (for purposes of that test) exceeds the threshold, the applicant is not eligible to receive benefits. Income eligibility tests and the calculation of countable income vary greatly across states.⁴⁰

This section of the Databook describes the types of eligibility tests in the states, the earned income disregards used for the net income tests, and the income eligibility standards used for the various tests. It also presents a calculation of the maximum income for initial eligibility at application. The first three tables in this section must be used together to fully understand the income eligibility tests in each state.

Income Eligibility Test for Applicants (Table I.E.1)

To determine initial eligibility for benefits, most states impose income eligibility tests on applicants. States use the total gross income calculated from the unit’s earned and unearned income as a starting point for these tests. States may impose one income test on applicants or

A gross income test compares the unit's total income (earned and unearned, including any deemed income) with a state-determined standard. If the unit's income is less than the standard, the next test is applied (if applicable) or the unit is considered eligible and a benefit is computed. A gross earnings test and an unearned income test operate similarly, but only the unit's earned income is used for a gross earnings test and only the unit's unearned income is used for an unearned income test.

States may also impose net income tests, either after a gross income test or in lieu of it. Net income is calculated by subtracting the state's earned income disregards from the unit's gross earned income and then adding the unit's unearned income to this amount. The net income is then compared to an income standard determined by the state. If the net income is less than the standard, the next test is applied (if applicable) or the unit is considered eligible and a benefit is computed.

Table I.E.1 describes states' income eligibility tests for determining whether an applicant is eligible for assistance.⁴¹ The table indicates the state income standard used for each test. "No explicit tests" indicates that either the state imposes no income tests on applicants (other than the implicit test inherent in the benefit computation formula) or the state imposes an income test, but the calculation of the test and disregards allowed for the test are no different from those used to calculate the benefit. Policies from 2020 include:

- Forty-four states have explicit net or gross income tests for applicants.
- Nineteen states require applicants to pass two or more income eligibility tests.
- Seven states have no explicit income eligibility tests for applicants.

Related tables: Table I.E.3 provides the eligibility standards used to determine eligibility for a three-person family. Tables I.D.1, I.D.2, and I.D.4 describe policies concerning the deeming of income from grandparents, stepparents, and immigrant parents, respectively, that may be used when determining gross income for income eligibility tests. Table I.E.2 describes the earned income disregards that may be used for net income tests. Table I.E.4 combines information on the income eligibility tests applied to applicants with information on the earned income disregards and eligibility standards to show the maximum earnings a family can have and still be eligible for TANF. Table L3, in the last section of this report, provides the same information as in table I.E.4 for selected years from 1996 through 2020.

Earned Income Disregards for Initial Income Eligibility Purposes (Table I.E.2)

States that impose a net income test generally disregard a portion of the unit's earned income before comparing the income to the state's income standard. The amount of disregarded earned income varies greatly across states. Table I.E.2 describes the earned income disregards applied to applicants' income in determining net income for the income eligibility tests.⁴² When a state has more than one net income test and imposes different disregards for the tests, the table will show two rows for the state describing both the disregard and for which net income test the disregard applies. When a state has no explicit net income tests, the table indicates "No explicit net income test." Some states have net income tests but do not apply a general earned income disregard; instead, they may disregard earnings only for specific expenses, such as child care. In those cases, "No disregards allowed" appears in the table. Key policies from 2020 include:

- Fifteen states have no explicit net income test for initial income eligibility purposes, so this table is not applicable. (In states that do not impose an explicit net income test as defined by the WRD, a unit's net income affects eligibility status by impacting whether they are eligible for a positive benefit.)
- One state (Ohio) has a net income test that allows applicants to deduct dependent care expenses, but they do not disregard any other earnings in applying the net income test.
- Two states (California and Texas) have two different net income tests, which use different disregards.

Additional disregards for child care expenses paid by a family or special disregards for units affected by a family cap or time limit are not included in the Databook; however, this information is included in the WRD.

Related tables: In some cases, states also use net income tests to determine a recipient's continuing eligibility. The earned income disregards used in applying net income tests for recipients' ongoing eligibility are captured in table IV.A.5. (When a state has established different earned income disregards for applicants and recipients, the disregards are generally lower for applicants and higher for recipients.) See table II.A.1 for the earned income disregards used in computing net income for purposes of determining the benefit level; whether a unit is eligible for a positive benefit is an implicit net income test in most states.

Standards for Determining Eligibility (Table I.E.3)

As described earlier, most income tests involve state-established income amounts that vary by the size of the assistance unit. The WRD includes the standards for each family size from 1 through 12. Table I.E.3 provides the standards for a three-person assistance unit.

Table I.E.3 identifies the standard by the name used in the caseworker manual. Under the former AFDC program, the standard for income eligibility tests was called the “need standard.” Currently, because of the complexity of state programs, there is no longer a single need standard concept. States may compare an assistance unit’s income against multiple standards, depending on the type or amount of income. Therefore, the term “need standard” is not used in the table unless the state explicitly uses it to refer to its eligibility standard. Key policies from 2020 include:

- Standards for determining eligibility vary significantly across states. The values for a family of three range from a $188 “Recognizable Needs” standard in Texas to a $4,258 “Standard of Need” in New Hampshire.

These values must be interpreted in conjunction with the information in other tables. The numbers do not by themselves indicate the maximum income at which a family may be eligible. That maximum depends on multiple policies, and on whether a family’s income is earned or unearned.

Some details concerning eligibility standards are not included in table I.E.3. In some states, different dollar amounts are used in different regions of the state; in those cases, table I.E.3 includes the amounts for the most populous area of the state. In other states, the amounts may be higher for families with certain types of “special needs,” such as a pregnancy; the amounts in table I.E.3 assume no special needs. Also, a few states vary standards for one-parent families, two-parent families, and child-only units; table I.E.3 includes values for a one-parent family with two children. Some states prorate the eligibility or benefit standards depending on whether a unit pays for shelter; the amounts in the table assume the unit pays all shelter costs and does not live in public housing or have a housing voucher.

Related tables: These standards by themselves are not comparable across states, since the income tests differ. To determine how the standards are used in practice, see tables I.D.1, I.D.2, I.D.4, I.E.1, and IV.A.4.

Maximum Income for Initial Eligibility for a Family of Three (Table I.E.4)

Table I.E.4 synthesizes the various financial rules related to initial eligibility to provide information on the maximum amount a family of three can earn and still be eligible for assistance. The calculation incorporates information on the income eligibility rules for applicants, earned income disregards for eligibility and benefit computation, benefit computation policies, and the eligibility and payment standards. The calculation determines the maximum amount of earnings an applicant can have and still be technically eligible for assistance in each state. Technical eligibility does not mean the unit will necessarily receive a cash benefit, but the unit will have passed all eligibility tests and will be eligible for some positive amount. Most states distribute a cash benefit only if it is greater than $10.

The calculation assumes the assistance unit includes one parent and two children, has only earned income, has no child care expenses, contains no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for all shelter costs with no subsidies, and is subject to the benefit standard that applies to the majority of the state's caseload. Key findings for 2020 include:

- The maximum monthly earnings a family of three can have at application and be eligible for TANF varies significantly across states. The values for a family of three range from $268 in Alabama to $2,359 in Minnesota.
- Across the states, the average (mean) earnings level that is the maximum possible amount allowing initial TANF eligibility is $930. The median figure is lower, at $848.

Related tables: Table L3 provides the maximum income for initial eligibility for selected years from 1996 through 2020. Table IV.A.6 provides information on the amount of earnings a recipient may have and remain eligible for assistance. (The figures for recipients may differ from those for applicants due to differences in income eligibility tests and earnings disregards.)

³ Alaska's TANF program is not currently implementing the diversion payment option due to systematic and program integrity reasons. Alaska may re-implement the payment option when its new eligibility software is fully launched and state statutes/regulations have been updated to better define diversion-eligible households. According to the legislation authorizing the program, a recipient can receive a cash payment worth up to three months of TANF benefits. If a family applies for assistance during the three-month ineligibility period, the entire amount of the diversion payment is treated as unearned income to the family. The diversion payment is prorated equally over the three months, and the prorated amount is counted as monthly income. An individual can receive diversion payments up to four times in a lifetime but no more than once every 12 months.

⁴ To be eligible, applicants must have been employed or self-employed in the application month or within the 12 months prior to the application month; have successfully completed an educational, vocational, or job training program in the application month or within the six months prior to the application month; or have a job offer for full-time employment that will begin within three calendar months of the grant diversion period.

⁶ Counties have the option to vary their diversion programs. These policies refer to Los Angeles County.

⁷ The maximum diversion cash payment is the greater of $2,000 or three times the maximum aid payment for the family size. In cases where an applicant has a one-time expense that exceeds the standard maximum diversion payment, payments up to $4,000 may be issued if necessary to retain self-sufficiency. Recipients may receive only $4,000 or three times the maximum aid payment for the family, whichever is greater, annually and no more than $10,000 in a lifetime. During the COVID-19 pandemic, the county temporarily expanded the maximum lump sum payment up to $5,000 for families facing hardship due to the pandemic.

⁸ If the unit applies for monthly TANF benefits after the diversion period (diversion amount divided by the maximum aid payment) ends, the state counts one month toward the time limit. If the unit applies during the diversion period, it can choose to count the diversion payment toward the time limit or to repay the diversion amount at a rate of 10 percent of the monthly benefit each month until the diversion is repaid. The number of months counted toward the 48-month time limit is calculated by dividing the total diversion payment by the maximum aid payment for the apparently eligible assistance unit at the time the diversion payment was made. The months resulting from the calculation less any partial month, are counted toward the 48-month time limit.

¹⁰ The benefit amount is determined on a case-by-case basis and cannot exceed $2,500.

¹⁵ Florida has three separate diversion programs: (1) up-front diversion for individuals in need of assistance because of unexpected circumstances or emergency situations; (2) relocation assistance for individuals who reside in an area with limited employment opportunities and experience one of the following: geographic isolation, formidable transportation barriers, isolation from extended family, or domestic violence that threatens the ability of a parent to maintain self-sufficiency; and (3) cash severance for TANF recipients who are employed and receiving earnings, able to verify their earnings, will remain employed for at least six months, have received cash assistance for at least six consecutive months since October 1996, and are eligible for at least one more month of TANF.

¹⁷ There is no limit on the number of times relocation assistance services are needed.

¹⁸ The client is ineligible for three months for up-front diversion and six months for cash severance and relocation assistance. If an up-front diversion recipient reapplies for TANF within the three-month period and the Regional Workforce Board confirms an emergency exists, TANF benefits are approved and the diversion benefit is prorated over the next eight months of eligibility. For severance cash assistance, if the family applies for cash assistance before the six-month period ends for emergency, the cash severance will be prorated by deducting $125 per month for eight months. For relocation assistance, if the family applies for cash assistance before the six-month period ends for emergency reasons other than domestic abuse, the relocation payment will be prorated and subtracted from any cash assistance payments received.

¹⁹ Up-front diversion and relocation assistance do not count toward time limits. Cash severance diversion does not count toward time limits if the payment is made in a month in which the unit also receives a TANF payment. If the payment is made in a month in which the unit does not receive a TANF payment, the cash severance diversion payment counts as a month toward the time limit.

²² Illinois operates its diversion program through local community partners.

²³ Some expenses have individual limits.

²⁶ The caretaker relative or parent must be employed or looking for work.

²⁸ Minnesota's four-month Diversionary Work Program (DWP) is mandatory for all TANF applicants, unless exempt. Recipients receive financial assistance and must participate in four months of intensive employment services focused on helping the participant obtain an unsubsidized job before entering regular TANF. Failure to comply with the employment services, which may include a structured job search, results in ineligibility for both DWP and TANF until compliance. After completing the four-month program, participants who still require assistance may apply for TANF as applicants.

³⁰ The unit may apply for TANF at the completion of the four-month diversion program. If a unit applies for TANF any time within 12 months of receiving either TANF or DWP assistance, it moves directly into TANF and is not eligible to participate in diversion.

³¹ The value of the payment is determined case by case depending on the specific needs of the family.

³³ New Jersey's diversion program, the Early Employment Initiative (EEI), is mandatory for applicants who have a work history that equals or exceeds four months of full-time employment in the past 12 months, appear to meet TANF eligibility requirements, are not in immediate need, and do not meet criteria for a deferral from work requirements. Participants receive a one-time, lump-sum payment and are required to pursue an intensive job search for 15 to 30 days while their application is processed. If participants obtain employment and withdraw their application, they are eligible to receive a second lump-sum payment to assist in the transition to employment. If no employment is secured, the applicant is referred back to the Work First New Jersey (WFNJ)/TANF agency for cash assistance.

³⁴ The maximum amount a family would receive is relative to the number of people in the unit. The amount included in the table is for a unit of three. The maximum diversion payment for a unit of eight or more people is $1,550. If the agency believes an individual may benefit, he or she may be considered suitable for repeated participation in the Early Employment Initiative (EEI) when determining subsequent eligibility for the program.

³⁶ The diversion payment is intended to assist the benefit group with accepting or retaining employment, remedying an emergency situation, or alleviating an unexpected short-term need.

³⁹ New York has three types of diversion payments: diversion payments (for crisis needs such as moving expenses, storage fees, or household structural or equipment repairs), diversion transportation payments (for employment-related transportation expenses), and diversion rental payments (for rental housing).

⁴⁰ Cash payment for emergency needs is limited to $430 a month for up to four months. Additional supportive services can include: housing/shelter costs; $1,000 maximum for the cost of books, tuition, and fees relating to a work activity; $1,000 maximum for moving expenses relating to a job offer; $500 maximum for vehicle repairs; $250 maximum for employment related clothing; $150 maximum for cost for tools or equipment required for employment; and $150 maximum for monthly transportation expenses.

⁴² The payment equals one, two, or three months of the family size allowance.

⁴³ If the unit applies for benefits before the three months have passed, the individual must repay the diversion payment. The payment will be prorated over a three-month period and the amount of the repayment will be deducted from the unit's monthly assistance payment.

⁴⁴ To be eligible, the applicant must have an identifiable one-time financial need, have been a resident of Tennessee for six months, have no identifiable barriers to employment, have earned a high school diploma or GED, and either be currently employed or have been steadily employed in six of the last 12 months, with at least three being consecutive. In two-parent units, both parents must meet the eligibility criteria to qualify for a diversion payment.

⁴⁵ To qualify for the state's diversion program, the assistance unit must meet one of the crisis criteria, including (1) the caretaker or second parent lost employment in the process month, application month, or two months before application; (2) a dependent child experienced a loss of financial support from the legal parent or stepparent within the past 12 months as a result of death, divorce, separation, abandonment, or termination of child support and the caretaker was employed within 12 months of the application or process month; (3) the caretaker or second parent graduated from a university, college, junior college, or technical training school within 12 months of the application or process month and was underemployed or unemployed; or (4) the caretaker or second parent is currently employed but still meets TANF requirements and is facing the loss or potential loss of transportation or shelter or has a medical emergency temporarily preventing him or her from continuing to work. If the unit has an open TANF activity requirement sanction and fails to demonstrate cooperation within the allowed time or is not eligible for a TANF grant of at least $10, the unit is ineligible for diversion assistance.

⁴⁶ To be eligible for diversion assistance, an applicant family must meet cash assistance financial eligibility and diversion eligibility criteria and, if it has no members who are mandatory applicants, must choose to participate in the diversion program. Families who meet the following criteria are mandatory applicants: (1) at least one member of the family is work eligible, (2) work-eligible individuals in the family are neither disregarded from nor meeting their cash assistance work requirement, (3) none of the work-eligible individuals have received a diversion assistance payment in the 12 months before the application month, (4) at least one work-eligible adult in a family who is not the primary caretaker of the children when both parents are able to work, and (5) at least one work-eligible adult in a family who has no barriers to obtain or maintain a job, and either has recent and stable employment with earnings of at least 150 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines, or has a marketable college degree or vocational education certificate.

⁴⁷ The unit may be transferred into regular TANF (Reach Up) at any time after the four-month period of diversion (Reach First) payments. It is at the caseworker's discretion to move a family into regular TANF during the four-month diversion period. However, should the unit need to apply for Reach Up in the months attributed to the Reach First payments, the payment will reduce dollar for dollar any Reach Up financial assistance in the months covered by the payment.

⁴⁹ The period of ineligibility is 180 days when the diversion payment equals four times the monthly TANF benefit the unit could have received or up to $1,500. The period may be shorter. The number of days of ineligibility is computed through these steps: (1) divide the diversion payment by 1/30th of the monthly TANF benefit the unit could have received; (2) round up to the higher whole number; (3) multiply by 1.33; (4) round up to the higher whole number.

⁵⁰ If a unit requests monthly benefits before 12 months have passed, the diversion payment becomes a loan. The amount of the loan is calculated by dividing the diversion payment by 12 and multiplying the quotient by the number of months remaining of the 12-month period since the diversion payment was received. The unit's monthly benefit is decreased by five percent each month until the loan is paid off.

⁵¹ For units that received diversion assistance before July 2000, three months are counted toward the lifetime limit.

⁵² The diversion payment is considered a loan to assist with expenses related to obtaining or maintaining employment, and it must be repaid. Repayments are expected within 12 months but may be extended to 24 months. The loan may be paid back in cash or through a combination of cash and volunteer community service (valued at the higher of the state or federal minimum wage).

⁷ An applicant deemed not job-ready due to a disability or limitation may be only temporarily exempt from job search requirements. If the applicant is otherwise eligible and the state decides at a later point that he or she is job ready, then he or she will be required to participate in the initial job search requirement.

⁹ Job search training and job readiness activities are allowed for up to 20 hours of the 80 total hours. For applicants already employed at application, employment hours count toward job search compliance even if scheduled hours are less than 4 hours per day.

¹² During the four-month DWP eligibility period, the case is closed until the family comes into compliance with employment services, at which point the benefit is prorated from the date of compliance. There is no minimum amount of time the case must be closed.

¹ If a state's policies vary for same-sex couples, the policy for same-sex couples is described in the notes.

² The needs, resources, and income of all household members who would be required to be in the mandatory filing unit must be considered in determining eligibility. If the mandatory filing unit is eligible, the payment is based solely on the pregnant woman's income and needs.

³ A pregnant woman must meet the eligibility requirements as if her child were already born and living with her. If the father of the unborn child is living in the home, his income, resources, and needs are counted to determine her eligibility and benefits. After the child is born, the father and child will be added to the assistance unit if eligible.

⁶ A pregnant woman is eligible upon verification of pregnancy.

⁷ A pregnant woman must meet the eligibility requirements as if her child were already born and living with her.

⁹ A pregnant woman is eligible on the first day of the month in which the child is expected.

¹⁰ A pregnant woman is eligible in the ninth month, unless her doctor verifies that she is unable to work; then she is eligible in the seventh month. The ninth month is defined as the calendar month in which the due date falls.

¹² A pregnant woman and her spouse or civil union partner, if living with her, are eligible for assistance.

¹³ This state does not provide benefits to two-parent, nondisabled families. If the father of the child is disabled, incapacitated, or caring for a disabled family member living in the home, he may be included.

¹⁵ The income and assets of both the mother and father are used to determine eligibility and benefits if the mother and the father live together and are married.

- ¹⁷ When the parents of the unborn child are married, the father's needs are included when determining the benefit.
- ¹⁸ Unborn children are included in the assistance unit the first day of the month of the mother's third trimester.
- ¹⁹ The father of the unborn child may be in the assistance unit if living in the home. Additionally, to be considered, the father must sign a sworn statement attesting to paternity of the child.
- ²⁰ This state does not provide benefits to two-parent, nondisabled families. If the pregnant woman resides with her spouse and either the woman or spouse is incapacitated, aged, or disabled, they may both be included.
- ²¹ A pregnant woman may apply in the month prior to her due date. A pregnant woman who is at risk or has a safety concern due to domestic violence may apply for TANF at any point during her pregnancy.
- ²² A pregnant woman must meet the eligibility requirements as if her child were already born and living with her. If the pregnant woman's spouse is living in the home, his income, resources, and needs are included in this calculation. If she is not married, the income, resources, and needs of the father will not be included in the eligibility calculation until the child is born and paternity has been established.
- ²³ A pregnant woman can begin to receive assistance within three months of her medically-verified due date.
- ²⁴ A pregnant woman is eligible three months prior to the expected month of delivery.
- ²⁵ A pregnant woman may be eligible in the seventh month if she is a minor or is documented as having a high-risk pregnancy.
- ²⁶ A pregnant woman may only receive benefits after a licensed medical practitioner has verified the pregnancy and determined the expected date of delivery.
- ²⁷ A pregnant woman is eligible in the third trimester of pregnancy if she is unmarried, unable to work due to a medically-verified at-risk pregnancy, and the at-risk pregnancy is verified no earlier than 30 days prior to the beginning of the third trimester.
- ²⁸ Pregnant women are eligible for cash assistance beginning in the sixth month of pregnancy. Prior to the sixth month of pregnancy, if a pregnant woman does not qualify for cash assistance, she may receive other support services (i.e., employment or child care related services) upon medical verification of the pregnancy.

³ Applicants have to demonstrate previous attachment to the workforce; under AFDC, the principal earner was required to work at least six of the last 13 quarters. The 13-quarter period must have ended within one year of applying for assistance. Generally, work history could also be established if one of the following applied: (1) the applicant received unemployment compensation (UC) benefits within 12 months of the date of application or (2) the applicant would have been eligible for UC benefits within the previous 12 months but did not apply or his or her employment was not covered by UC laws.

⁴ To be eligible for cash assistance, the principal earner has to have been employed less than 100 hours during the four-week period before the date of eligibility for cash aid. The state does not allow an exemption for employment temporarily exceeding 100 hours in a month.

⁵ Applicants must have been connected to the workforce, which includes one of the following: (1) currently working at least 20 hours a week, (2) receiving Unemployment Compensation, or received UC benefits within 12 months prior to the application date, (3) unemployed or working less than 20 hours a week and earned $500 within the six months before application, (4) receiving retirement benefits or received retirement benefits in any of the six months prior to the application month, or (5) has received disability benefits based on 100 percent disability in any of the last six months.

⁶ The applicant may not have turned down a bona fide offer of training or employment without good cause, and must be available for full-time labor. The state does not allow an exemption for employment temporarily exceeding 100 hours in a month.

¹¹ Policies shown are for all areas of the state, with the exception of Kansas City.

² This column describes whether the state requires unmarried minor parents, who have not been legally emancipated, to live with their parents or in another state-approved setting. If "Yes" is coded, a minor is not eligible to receive assistance unless living with a parent or in an approved setting. Under federal policy, minors may be exempt from this requirement under the following circumstances: the minor has no parent, legal guardian, or other appropriate relative who is living or whose whereabouts are known; the minor or his or her child has been subjected to, or faces an imminent risk of, serious physical or emotional harm in the residence of the minor's parent or legal guardian; or the state agency determines it is in the best interest of the minor's child to waive the requirement.

⁸ Minor parents may be the head of the unit if they are 16 or 17 and have been married, have been placed in independent living by the department of children and families, are in an approved transitional living program, or are in Job Corps.

⁹ A minor parent can head his or her own unit if he or she meets an exemption to the residency requirement.

¹¹ If the minor receives TANF as the unit head, the benefit is generally paid through a protective payee.

¹² A minor parent may live on his or her own when the Department of Children and Families determines that he or she has acquired sufficient independent living and parenting skills.

¹⁵ A minor parent is exempt from living with his or her parents if the minor parent's legal living parent or guardian will not allow the minor parent to live in his or her home or the minor parent lived apart from any parent or legal guardian for at least a year prior to either the birth of the dependent child or applying for benefits.

- ¹⁶ Individuals under the age of 18 can head their own units if they have been emancipated by court action.
- ¹⁷ The minor parent must be at least 16 years old to receive assistance as the head of the assistance unit.
- ¹⁸ Minor parents are exempt from living with a parent, legal guardian or a legally responsible caretaker relative, or in an adult-supervised supportive living arrangement if they have a marital status of separated, divorced, or widowed, or are active duty in the uniformed service.
- ¹⁹ If the minor lives with a parent, guardian, or relative, the benefit is generally paid to that person as a protective payee. A protective payment is not required if the minor lives in a supervised supportive living arrangement such as a group home.
- ²⁰ A minor parent may be exempt from the residency requirement if it is impractical for the minor parent to live with his or her parents, legal guardian, or other adult relative.
- ²¹ Minors who are at least six months pregnant are subject to the residency requirements.
- ²² A minor parent is exempt from living with his or her parents if no adult relative or legal guardian will allow the minor parent and child to live with them.
- ²³ Minor parents may be exempt if they are 17 years old and have lived independently for at least six months, live with their child's other parent and both parents are age 16 or older, or lack an appropriate living arrangement.
- ²⁴ A minor parent may form his or her own unit provided none of the minor parent's siblings receive benefits.

³ A married person who does not have children in common with his or her spouse may be included if it is advantageous to the group.

⁶ If both the parent and the stepparent are able bodied, then the unit is considered a two-parent unit, and is therefore not eligible for assistance.

⁸ The stepparent is a mandatory member of the assistance unit but the unit has the option to exclude a new spouse from the unit for up to 18 months after the first month of marriage. To be eligible for this exemption, the total assets of the assistance unit, including the new spouse, must be equal to or less than double the asset limit and the income of the unit, including the new spouse, must be less than twice the payment standard for the group size.

⁹ The stepparent is included in the household if they are the only parent in the home and apply as a needy caregiver, or both the natural parent and the stepparent have separate children and both households are applying for benefits.

¹⁴ The stepparent is included in the unit for income purposes but cannot be the mandatory work program participant.

¹⁵ Stepparents may choose to be included in the unit when the spouse is living in the home and the stepparent has no child in common with the spouse. A stepparent who wishes to be included in the unit must comply with all work program regulations for either a single-parent or two-parent family.

² Lawful permanent residents are individuals who have been granted authorization to permanently live and work in the United States. Pre-PRWORA LPRs with 40 quarters of work are exempt from eligibility restrictions by federal law and are therefore potentially eligible in all states.

⁶ Obtaining permanent residency does not negate the person's original entry status for TANF eligibility in the state.

⁴ Parolees are individuals permitted entry into the United States in cases of emergency or because of an overriding public interest. The table only discusses the eligibility of aliens paroled into the United States for at least one year. Aliens paroled into the United States for less than a year are not "qualified" aliens according to the immigrant definition in PRWORA.

⁵ Battered noncitizens refer to those individuals who have been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty in the U.S. by a spouse or parent who is a U.S. citizen or LPR. To be eligible for benefits, individuals must no longer be living in the same household as the abuser and there must be a connection between the abuse and the need for benefits. See 8 USC 1641 (c).

⁶ Two groups of nonqualified aliens--those who are in the country on a temporary basis (student visas, work visas, and so on), and those who are in the country without authorization--are not eligible for benefits in any state. However, there are other groups of nonqualified aliens, such as persons residing under color of law (PRUCOL). This column describes whether any nonqualified aliens other than those who are temporary or unauthorized are potentially eligible for benefits using state funds.

⁹ Certain American Indians born in Canada may be regarded as lawful permanent residents for purposes of eligibility and are therefore qualified aliens. These individuals are eligible for benefits during the five-year bar. Lawful permanent residents who are Hmong or Highland Lao vets of the Vietnam War are also eligible.

¹¹ Battered children under age 18 are not subject to the five-year ban.

¹² All immigrant units are funded through a state program with the same eligibility rules as TANF.

¹⁸ Noncitizens at risk of domestic violence are eligible for assistance.

¹⁹ Individuals permanently residing in the United States under color of law are potentially eligible.

²¹ Noncitizens who entered the U.S. before August 22, 1996 but obtained qualified status after August 22, 1996 are potentially eligible if they have 40 quarters of work. If they can prove continuous residence since at least August 21, 1996, the five-year bar following qualified status does not apply. If they cannot prove continuous residence, the five-year bar applies.

²² Certain American Indians born in Canada may be regarded as lawful permanent residents (LPR) for purposes of eligibility and are therefore qualified aliens. These individuals are eligible for benefits during the five-year bar. Lawful permanent residents who entered the country as a refugee, asylee, or deportee who later converted to LPR status are not subject to the five-year bar.

²³ All lawfully present nonqualified aliens who meet the residency requirements are potentially eligible to receive state-funded benefits.

⁴ Deportees are individuals who have been granted withholding of removal, previously known as withholding of deportation.

⁵ Parolees are individuals permitted entry into the United States in cases of emergency or because of an overriding public interest. The table only discusses the eligibility of aliens paroled into the United States for at least one year. Aliens paroled into the United States for less than a year are not "qualified" aliens according to the immigrant definition in PRWORA.

⁶ Battered noncitizens refer to those individuals who have been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty in the U.S. by a spouse or parent who is a U.S. citizen or LPR. To be eligible for benefits, individuals must no longer be living in the same household as the abuser and there must be a connection between the abuse and the need for benefits. See 8 USC 1641 (c).

⁸ Only lawful permanent residents who have previously been refugees are eligible.

¹⁰ Forty qualifying quarters of work are required.

¹³ Qualified aliens with this status are only eligible for benefits for five years after obtaining this status. However, they may continue to be eligible if they have converted their status to legal permanent resident and have 40 qualifying quarters of work.

- ³ The policies regarding shared living costs apply to assistance units living in households including other adults. These columns do not capture policies regarding states' treatment of assistance units in public or subsidized housing.
- ⁴ Unless otherwise specified, the reduction applies to both eligibility calculations and benefit computation, when applicable.
- ⁵ The income of adult non-unit members living in the household is included only if the income received is formally earmarked for a member of the assistance unit.
- ⁶ As part of the needy family income test, the income of the spouse of the non-parent caretaker head-of-household is counted; when it is determined that the assistance unit resides in a needy family, the spouse's income is not counted for benefit computation.
- ⁷ Only one additional adult may be included in the unit.
- ⁸ Registered domestic partners of the primary caretaker may be included at the option of the unit head.
- ⁹ The items of need are housing, utilities, food, and clothing. The state-determined values vary by unit size.
- ¹⁰ The additional adult must provide care that is deemed essential and would need to be provided if the additional adult were not in the household.
- ¹¹ Cohabiting partners are mandatory unit members.
- ¹² The amount of the reduction varies by family size.
- ¹³ To be eligible, the adult must be deemed essential to the well-being of the family applying for or receiving TANF benefits.
- ¹⁴ The income of any non-relative adult is counted if he or she acts in the role of a spouse.
- ¹⁵ Partners may also subtract the actual amount paid to individuals not living in the household but claimed as dependents, and alimony and child support payments made to individuals outside the household. The remaining income after all disregards are applied is counted in the unit's unearned income for eligibility and benefit computation purposes.
- ¹⁶ A non-caretaker adult is potentially eligible if he or she is not required to be in the unit and provides a service necessary to the health or protection of a unit member with a mental or physical disability, when it is less expensive to include this person in the unit than to purchase the service from another source.
- ¹⁷ Non-caretaker adults are included only if they qualify as a "needy essential person," which is defined as someone not required to be in the unit who provides a service necessary to the health or protection of a unit member with a mental or physical disability, when it is less expensive to include this person in the unit than to purchase the service from another source.
- ¹⁸ If the individual lives in Chittenden County, the need standard includes the amount of shelter costs paid by the included members up to $450.
- ¹⁹ Additional adults can be included in the unit at the option of the caretaker only if they are needy, not otherwise eligible for TANF, and providing services essential to the well-being of the children—either caring for a disabled family member living in the home or providing child care that allows the caretaker to work or participate in work-related activities on a full-time basis.

² This column provides information on the potential eligibility of children who live with nonrelative caretakers in regular household settings; it does not address the extent to which pregnant or parenting teens may live with nonrelatives in alternative living arrangements.

³ The child is eligible through the month in which he or she turns 18.

⁵ The child is only potentially eligible if the nonrelative caretaker is a legal permanent guardian or an unlicensed foster care caregiver.

⁷ The child is only potentially eligible if the nonrelative caretaker is a court ordered legal guardian or custodian.

- ¹⁰ Students are funded solely by the state from age 19 until they turn 21 years old. Children age 18 are funded through TANF funds regardless of when they are expected to graduate.
- ¹¹ The child is eligible through the calendar year in which he or she turns 19.
- ¹² A child is eligible, provided the child's expected graduation date falls before he or she turns 19.
- ¹³ If a child is age 6 through 15 and not attending school full time, the entire family loses TANF eligibility, regardless of whether there are other eligible children present. If the child is age 16 or older and not attending school full time, and the family has other eligible children, only the child not attending school is excluded from the assistance unit.
- ¹⁴ Unrelated legal guardians receive benefits paid from a state-only funding source.
- ¹⁵ A 16- or 17-year-old not attending school must negotiate and comply with an Employability/Service Plan.
- ¹⁶ The child is eligible for one month after he or she turns 19.
- ¹⁷ A child must be living with nonrelative caretakers who are either court-appointed guardians or conservators in order to be potentially eligible for assistance.
- ¹⁸ The policy shown in the table reflects eligibility for federal TANF. New Hampshire funds an additional separate state program where students through age 19 are eligible for benefits.
- ¹⁹ Individuals up to age 21 are considered children if they are enrolled in a special education program.
- ²⁰ The child is only potentially eligible if the nonrelative caretaker is a legal guardian.
- ²¹ A student receiving special education services regulated by the State Board of Education will be considered a dependent child until age 22.
- ²² The child is eligible through the month he or she turns 19 if he or she also graduates from high school in the same month.
- ²³ The child is only potentially eligible if the nonrelative caretaker is a legal guardian or custodian.
- ²⁴ A child is eligible through age 18 if the child is expected to graduate before or in the month of his or her 19th birthday.
- ²⁵ A 16- or 17-year-old not attending school must take part in case management services.
- ²⁶ A child with a disability who will not complete high school or an equivalent vocational or technical training before turning 19 is eligible for benefits through the month of his or her 19th birthday.
- ²⁷ The child is potentially eligible if both the child and the nonrelative caretaker are members of, or eligible for membership in, a federally recognized tribe or if the child is currently a refugee or asylee and shares the same ethnicity, culture, country or origin, religion, language, and/or nationality as the nonrelative caretaker.
- ²⁸ Children age 18 and without a disability are eligible for benefits if they will graduate before their 19th birthday. A child with a disability who will not complete high school or an equivalent vocational or technical training before turning 19 is eligible for benefits through the month of his or her 19th birthday.
- ²⁹ A truant child is removed from the grant unless the parent cooperates in developing a plan to return the child to school.
- ³⁰ An 18-year-old is eligible if enrolled in secondary school or vocational/technical school and is expected to graduate prior to or in the same month as his or her 19th birthday.
- ³¹ Only children living with nonrelative caretakers who are court ordered guardians or acting in loco parentis are eligible. Nonrelatives must pass a criminal background check in order to receive a TANF grant on behalf of a child.

Source: Urban Institute's Welfare Rules Database, funded by HHS/ACF.

¹ A child under the age of 18 receiving SSI may be included in the unit at the caretaker's request.

⁵ While the SSI recipient's SSI allocation is not counted, the non-SSI income and assets of the individual are counted.

⁴ Only one caretaker relative may be included in the unit at a time.

⁵ Although the spouse is not counted as a member of the assistance unit, some of his or her income may be deemed available to the unit.

⁶ The caregiver's spouse or domestic partner's income is used to determine eligibility for the caregiver and children.

⁷ If the spouse is not included in the unit, his or her income is deemed to the non-parent caretaker.

³ Units including an elderly person may exempt $3,000; all other units exempt $2,000.

⁴ Vehicles are exempt if used for one of the following: (1) to meet the family's basic needs, such as getting food and medical care or other essentials; (2) to go to and from work, school, training, or work activity (such as job search or community service); (3) as the family's house; (4) to produce self-employment income; or (5) to transport a disabled family member, whether or not he or she is a part of the assistance unit. If the vehicle does not meet one of these requirements, the equity value of the vehicle is counted in the determination of resources.

⁹ Units including an elderly person may exempt $3,500; all other units exempt $2,250.

¹⁰ A single-parent unit may exempt $4,650 of the vehicle's equity value if it is used for job search or to travel to work or education and training. Otherwise, $1,500 of the equity value may be excluded. A two-parent unit may exempt $4,650 of the equity value of two vehicles. The vehicle is completely excluded if it is used more than 50 percent of the time to produce income or as a dwelling.

¹¹ If at least one member of the household applying was a program recipient in the month prior to the month of application, then the asset limit is increased to $5,000.

¹⁴ The equity value of any additional non-exempt vehicles counts toward the asset limit.

¹⁶ Recreational vehicles are not exempt. If a vehicle is non-exempt, its equity value counts toward the asset limit. Additionally, industrial vehicles—heavy haulers, pulpwood trucks, etc.—are exempt as long as they are used for income-producing purposes over 50 percent of the time, or as long as they annually produce income consistent with their fair-market value. Determination of whether to count non-recreational vehicles is made on a case-by-case basis.

²⁰ The entire vehicle is exempt only if used for employment, training, medical transportation, or as a home. If a unit has more than one vehicle that meets the exemption criteria, only the vehicle with the greatest equity value will be exempt.

²² Recreational vehicles are not exempt and are evaluated for fair market value.

²⁴ The asset limit was removed due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Under New Mexico's standard asset limits policy, the vehicle is only exempt if it is equipped for those with physical impairments or used for transportation to work, work activities, or daily living requirements. If the vehicle is not used for these purposes, the entire equity value of the vehicle is subject to the asset test.

²⁹ The asset limit for new TANF applicants is $2,500. Once the participant enters the pre-TANF program or becomes a TANF recipient, the asset limit increases to $10,000. During the COVID-19 pandemic, the asset limit is $10,000 for new applicants and all recipients.

³¹ Exemptions for adult drivers cannot exceed two vehicles per household. However, the household may also exempt the entire value of a vehicle that is used primarily to transport a disabled family member, to produce income, or as the family's home.

³³ In addition to one primary vehicle, an assistance unit may totally exclude a vehicle used to transport water or fuel to the home when it is not piped in, a vehicle used to transport a disabled member or SSI recipient in the household, or a vehicle used in producing income or as a home. An assistance unit may also exclude $4,650 of the fair-market value of a vehicle used to transport members of the unit, obtain or continue employment, or attend school or training.

³⁵ All licensed vehicles used for income-producing purposes or for transporting a disabled household member are exempt.

³⁷ A person must be work-eligible to qualify for the vehicle exemption.

¹ In this table, "grandparent" refers to the parent of a minor parent. This table describes whether a portion of the grandparent's income is deemed available to the minor and her child when the grandparent is not part of the assistance unit but living in the household with the minor. The table describes the disregards that the grandparent and his or her dependents are allowed to claim for their own needs. The remaining income after these disregards are deducted from the grandparent's income is the amount available, or deemed, to the minor parent and the children. The table captures instances in which the income of the grandparent is deemed for both initial eligibility determination and benefit computation; if those policies differ, the eligibility policies are reflected in the table, and the benefit computation policies are footnoted. In general, states also deduct child support payments, alimony, and payments made to dependents outside the household from the grandparent's income before deeming to the unit. Some states may deduct the grandparents' child care expenses prior to deeming; see the WRD for more information. See table I.E.3 for information on the value of the standards for a family of three.

⁴ The minor child's child is not included in the calculation.

⁶ As part of the needy family test, the income of the grandparent is counted for eligibility determination but not for benefit computation.

⁷ Applicants may disregard $90 for the eligibility test that compares net income to the MBSAC. Applicants and recipients may disregard $500 (minus any portion of the $500 applied to disability income), plus 50 percent of the remainder for the eligibility test that compares net income to the MAP, and for benefit computation. The $500 and 50 percent disregard is applied to the sum of the earnings of the grandparent and minor parent.

⁸ For benefit computation, the parent can disregard 100 percent of income, up to the Federal Poverty Guideline in all months.

¹⁰ The grandparent may initially disregard earned income up to 100 percent of the Federal Poverty Guideline for the number of dependents in his or her household. He or she may then disregard an additional $90 of earned income.

¹¹ For benefit computation, the parent can disregard 100 percent in the first month of earnings, 75 percent in months two-seven, and 50 percent thereafter. This disregard is applied to individuals working 20 or more hours a week.

¹² For benefit computation, child support is another income disregard.

¹⁴ For benefit computation, the unit can disregard $90 and 20 percent of the remainder.

¹⁶ Married couples with a child in common may disregard $1,200.

⁴ The income of the stepparent is not deemed available to the unit for benefit computation.

⁸ The stepparent's income is deemed only to the spouse or civil union partner.

¹⁰ The assistance unit has the option to exclude a new spouse and his or her income and assets for a period of up to 18 months, beginning the first month after marriage, for marriages that occurred on or after January 1, 2020. If the stepparent is excluded from the unit, his or her income is not deemed to the unit for any purpose during the exclusion period. To be eligible for this option, the total assets of the assistance unit, including the new spouse, must be equal to or less than double the asset limit and the income of the unit, including the new spouse, must be less than twice the payment standard for the group size. If the unit takes this option, the new spouse is not included in the unit and the spouse's income and assets are not counted for up to 18 months. After the 18 month period ends, the income and resources of the new spouse must be included in the unit.

¹³ If an individual marries while receiving TANF benefits, all stepparent income is disregarded for the first six months.

¹⁴ This disregard is applicable to those working at least 30 hours per week. If those working are employed less than 30 hours a week, then the disregard is $120 and 50 percent of the remainder.

⁷ For benefit computation, there is a 67 percent disregard (the $90 disregard is for initial eligibility determination only).

- ⁸ For benefit computation, additional disregards are allowed: the need standard for the parent and his or her dependents outside the assistance unit, and actual alimony and child support payments.
- ⁹ For benefit computation and continuing eligibility, the excluded parent may disregard $90 in all months, plus $30 in the first 12 consecutive months of earnings, plus 33.3 percent of remainder in the first 4 consecutive months of earnings.
- ¹⁰ An excluded parent may disregard dependent care expenses up to $200 per month for each dependent child under the age of 2 and $175 per month for each dependent child age 2 or older or incapacitated adult for the net income test and benefit computation.
- ¹¹ For benefit computation, the parent may also disregard 67 percent of remaining earnings.
- ¹² The immigrant parent's total countable income is divided by the total aided plus unaided family members, which includes the parents plus all dependents in the household; the amount disregarded equals that per-capita amount times the number of unaided family members.
- ¹³ For purposes of benefit computation, an excluded parent may disregard 20 percent.
- ¹⁴ The needs of ineligible family members are defined as the standard of assistance for the unit size including both eligible and ineligible members minus the standard of assistance for the unit size with only the eligible members.
- ¹⁵ For the disregard for eligibility purposes, the poverty guideline and payment standard are based on the number of family members who are eligible for TANF. There is no disregard for benefit computation.
- ¹⁶ For benefit computation, the final earned income disregard equals 58 percent of the remainder after other disregards.
- ¹⁷ The needs of the ineligible parents and ineligible children are computed as the need standard for a unit including the ineligible family members minus the need standard for a unit with only the eligible members. For benefit computation, the parent disregards an amount equal to the payment standard for a unit including the ineligible family members minus the payment standard for a unit with only the eligible members; child support payments may also be disregarded.
- ¹⁸ The earned income disregard is 50 percent for earnings from self-employment, earnings from room and board, or earnings from rental income.
- ¹⁹ The immigrant parent's remaining countable income is divided by the number of people in the assistance unit plus the parent; the amount disregarded equals that per-capita amount (i.e., the parent's per-capita share).
- ²⁰ For benefit computation, there is a $200 disregard followed by 50 percent of the remainder.
- ²¹ The disregards for benefit computation are the same as the disregards for the net income test.
- ²² For benefit computation, there is a 50 percent earned income disregard.
- ²³ For benefit computation, the parent can disregard 100 percent in the first month of earnings, 75 percent in months two through seven, and 50 percent thereafter.
- ²⁴ For benefit computation, child support is another income disregard.
- ²⁵ The immigrant parent's countable income is divided by the total aided plus unaided family members, which includes the parents plus all dependents in the household; the amount deemed to the unit equals that per-capita amount times the number of unaided family members.
- ²⁶ Each excluded parent has a lifetime limit of one 13-month cycle of the extra disregards, unless the excluded parent is employed for less than six consecutive months, in which case the 13-month cycle starts over upon re-employment.
- ²⁷ This disregard is applicable to those working at least 30 hours per week. If those working are employed less than 30 hours a week, then the disregard is $120 and 50 percent of the remainder.
- ²⁸ The excluded parent may disregard 50 percent of earnings for the net income test and benefit computation.

³¹ These policies apply to parents who are excluded from the assistance unit due to the five-year bar for qualified immigrants. Vermont's policies do not describe how income is treated when non-citizen parents are excluded due to other immigrant statuses.

³³ For benefit computation, the parent can disregard 40 percent of earnings.

⁵ When the total countable income equals or exceeds the applicable benefit level, the assistance unit is no longer eligible for WFNJ/TANF benefits except for cases with earned income that are subject to six-month reporting requirements. Such cases need not report changes in earned income until such time as the assistance unit's total income exceeds 130 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines. However, if the assistance unit does report a change, the county or municipal agency will act on that change. For households where a non-needy stepparent is married to a natural or adoptive recipient parent, the gross household income may not exceed 150 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines.

⁵ Applicant units who received benefits in one of the last four months may disregard $200 and 50 percent of the remainder.

⁷ This disregard applies to individuals working full time (defined as 20 hours a week for individuals with a child under age 6 and 30 hours a week for all others). Individuals who are not employed full time may disregard $120.

⁸ An applicant may disregard 50 percent of the remainder after disregarding $100 if he or she has received benefits in the past four months.

¹ The values in this table represent the maximum amount of earnings an applicant can have and still be technically eligible for assistance in each state. Technical eligibility does not mean that the unit will necessarily receive a cash benefit, but it will have passed all the eligibility tests and be technically eligible for some positive benefit. Most states only distribute a cash benefit equaling $10 or more. Initial eligibility is calculated assuming that the unit is employed at application, has only earned income, has no child care expenses, contains one adult and no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for shelter, and lives in the most populated area of the state.

⁷ The mean and median calculations only include one value per state (the policy affecting the largest portion of the caseload).

II. Benefits

The tables in this chapter of the Databook describe key aspects of the rules for calculating and distributing the assistance unit's benefit as of July 1, 2020. The tables include information on how benefits are calculated, the maximum benefits for different types of assistance units, and how benefits are administered.

A. If a family passes all eligibility tests, what is received?

Rules for calculating benefits apply once the family has passed all eligibility tests, both nonfinancial and financial. State rules for calculating benefits vary, and the calculations across states range in complexity. In the more straightforward calculations, net income is subtracted from a state-determined standard (often called the payment standard), which varies by family size, and the benefit paid is the difference (sometimes referred to as the income deficit). Some states, however, either use more complex calculations or pay a flat grant amount. The following section describes these policies in greater detail.

Earned Income Disregards for Benefit Computation (Table II.A.1)

When states use net income for benefit computation, they disregard a portion of the assistance unit's income in calculating the income of the unit. Table II.A.1 describes the earned income disregards allowed when calculating the benefit. If a state pays a flat grant amount (explained further below), then earned income disregards are not relevant to benefit computation and "no disregards – flat grant amount" appears in the table. In some cases, states use different earned income disregards to determine the benefit of a unit in its first month of eligibility versus subsequent months. This information is included in the tables and notes. Policies for 2020 include:

- All 49 states that vary benefits with income use an earned income disregard.
- Of the states that do have earned income disregards for benefit computation, 35 have a disregard that applies in all months (including Virginia whose income disregard amount varies by unit size) and 14 states have an income disregard that changes over time.

Some states disregard a portion of the child care expenses paid by a family or allow special disregards for units subject to a family cap or time limit. Those disregards are not included in the table, but are captured in the WRD.

Related tables: Disregards for benefit computation and income eligibility may differ. For information on the earned income disregards used for an applicant's income eligibility, see table I.E.2. See table IV.A.5 for the earned income disregards used with income eligibility tests for recipients' ongoing eligibility. Table L4, in the last section of this report, describes the earned income disregards used for benefit computation for selected years from 1996 through 2020.

Benefit Determination Policies (Table II.A.2)

Table II.A.2 describes how states compute benefits for units that pass all applicable eligibility tests. In many states, net income is subtracted from a state-determined payment standard, which typically varies by the size of the assistance unit. The benefit paid to the family is then the difference between the net income and state payment standard, sometimes referred to as the income deficit. In other states, a statutory maximum benefit is imposed, generally varying by family size. In these states, the benefit is either the income deficit or the statutory maximum, whichever is less. Still other states multiply the income deficit by a percentage, which is sometimes referred to as the benefit reduction rate. This percentage of the income deficit is the benefit provided to the unit. Some states combine both a statutory maximum and benefit reduction rate into their calculation. Finally, some states provide a fixed (flat grant) amount, regardless of family income. Policies for 2020 include:

- A majority of states (34) compute benefits for all or most of their caseload by subtracting income from a selected dollar amount (a payment standard); the benefit equals the difference (the income deficit).
- Fifteen states pay only a portion of the income deficit, impose a maximum, or use both of those strategies in combination.
- Two states—Arkansas and Wisconsin—determine benefits for eligible families in a way that does not vary with family income.

Related tables: For the income standards named in this table, table II.A.3 gives the value of the standard for a three-person family. Table II.A.4 combines information from table II.A.2 with information on benefit standards for various family sizes and presents the benefit paid to an assistance unit with no net income and with two, three, four, five, or six members. Table II.A.1 describes the earned income disregards allowed in calculating the net income used for benefit computation, and tables I.D.1, I.D.2, I.D.4, and IV.A.2 include policies on the treatment of unearned income (amounts deemed from grandparent units, stepparent units, immigrant parents, and treatment of child support income). Table L5, in the last section of this report, provides the maximum benefits paid to a three-person unit for selected years from 1996 through 2020.

Standards for Determining Benefits (Table II.A.3)

As described earlier, benefit computations involve state-established income amounts that almost always vary by the size of the assistance unit. The WRD includes the benefit standards used for each family size from 1 through 12. Table II.A.3 provides the standards for a three-person assistance unit with one adult and two children. The first two columns of the table describe what we refer to in general terms as the “payment standard”—the dollar amount from which net income is subtracted, or the flat grant amount in the few states that use that approach. The first column gives the state’s name for this standard, and the second column gives the amount of this standard for a three-person family. In states that impose a statutory maximum benefit, the third and fourth columns of the table provide the state’s name for that standard and the amount of the maximum benefit for a three-person family. Policy highlights from 2020 include:

- Twelve states have a statutory maximum benefit. The amount for a family of three ranges from $170 in Mississippi to $1,044 in Minnesota. (The amount for Minnesota includes the SNAP allotment; excluding the portion intended for food assistance, the maximum benefit in Minnesota is $632.)

In some states, different dollar amounts are used in different regions of the state; in those cases, the table includes the amounts applied to the most populous area of the state with a footnote indicating that the benefits are not constant across the state. In other states, the amounts may be higher for families with certain special needs, such as a pregnancy; the amounts in the table assume no special needs. Also, a few states have different sets of standards for one-parent families, two-parent families, and child-only units (in other words, the payment standard might differ for a single parent with two children compared with a married couple with one child, even though both units have three people); the table shows the values for a one-parent family with two children. Finally, some states prorate the eligibility or benefit standards depending on whether a unit pays for shelter; the amounts in the table assume the unit pays all shelter costs and does not live in public or subsidized housing.

Related tables: The standards by themselves are not necessarily comparable across states, since benefit computation procedures differ. To determine how the standards are used in practice, see table II.A.2. Table II.A.4 provides the benefit paid to two- to six-person units with no other income, and table L5 provides the three-person maximum benefits for selected years from 1996 through 2020. Table II.A.5 provides the benefit paid to a unit consisting of a single child, with no adults.

Maximum Monthly Benefit for a Family with No Income (Table II.A.4)

The maximum benefit calculation combines the information on a state's benefit computation policies with the dollar amounts used for benefit computation to present the benefit paid to a unit with no income. If a state computes benefits as a payment standard minus net income, then this figure will simply equal the payment standard. In other cases, this figure will equal a statutory maximum benefit (which is less than the payment standard). In still other cases, it will be a percentage of the payment standard. Table II.A.4 provides information on the maximum benefit in each state for family sizes two through six. The calculation assumes the assistance unit includes one parent and the other unit members are children, the unit contains no children subject to a family cap, no assistance unit members have special needs, the unit pays for all shelter costs with no subsidies, and the unit is subject to the benefit standard that applies to the majority of the state's caseload. Key findings for 2020 include:

- The maximum monthly benefit for a family of three with no income ranges from $170 in Mississippi to $1,086 in New Hampshire.
- Across the states, the average (mean) maximum monthly benefit for a family of three is $483. The median figure is slightly higher, at $492.

Data for family sizes larger than six people may be found in the WRD.

Related tables: Table L5 provides the benefit paid to a three-person assistance unit with no net income for selected years from 1996 through 2020. Table II.A.5 gives the maximum benefits paid to child-only units with one child.

Maximum Monthly Benefit for a Child-Only Unit with One Child, No Income (Table II.A.5)

Table II.A.5 provides the maximum monthly TANF benefit that could be paid to a child-only unit consisting of a single child. Information is shown for three different circumstances that may lead to child-only units: when the child lives with a nonparent caretaker who has never been included in the unit, a parent or caretaker who receives SSI, or a parent who is excluded due to immigrant status. (If a state's TANF program does not provide benefits in one or more of those situations, no value is shown and more information is provided in a footnote.) Policies for 2020 include:

- Among the states whose TANF programs include at least two of these three types of child-only units, seven states pay different TANF benefits depending on the reason that the unit includes only children.
- Across the states, the average (mean) child-only benefit is $269 when the child lives with a nonparent caretaker, $252 when the child lives with a parent excluded from the unit due to SSI receipt, and $266 when the child lives with a parent excluded from the unit due to immigrant status.

Related tables: For more information on policies leading to a unit being child-only, tables I.B.5, I.B.6, and I.B.7 provide information on parents who are immigrants, table I.B.10 provides information on SSI recipients, and table I.B.11 provides information on nonparent caretakers.

Benefit Issuance Policies (Table II.A.6)

Table II.A.6 provides the method by which states deliver TANF benefits to families. The four possible methods for distributing benefits are: paper check, electronic benefit transfer (EBT) cards, electronic payment cards (EPC), and electronic funds transfers (EFT). An EBT card is a state-issued debit card on which benefits are deposited by the state, similar to (and sometimes the same as) the cards used by the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP). An EPC card is similar to an EBT card; however, EPC cards are issued and maintained by a third-party brand, such as Visa or MasterCard, rather than the state. An EFT is an electronic direct deposit into a recipient's checking account. In addition, some states may offer benefits in the form of direct vendor payments or vouchers. These instances are footnoted.

Under the Middle Class Tax Relief and Job Creation Act of 2012, states are directed to prevent the use of EBT and EPC cards "in any liquor store; any casino, gambling casino, or gaming establishment; or any retail establishment which provides adult-oriented entertainment.”⁴³ The last column of table II.A.6 describes the locations where states prohibit the use of EBT or EPC cards, beyond those already prohibited under federal law. Policies for 2020 include:

- Forty states allow electronic benefits transfer (EBT) as a form of benefit issuance.
- Ten states allow electronic payment cards (EPC) as a form of benefit issuance.
- Twenty-nine states allow electronic funds transfer (EFT) as a form of benefit issuance.

¹The table describes the earned income disregards used to compute a recipient's benefit. If different disregards are used to compute an applicant's benefit in the first month, they are footnoted. Only earned income disregards are described in the table. Child care disregards and other special disregards--such as deductions for units subject to time limits and family caps, and earned income disregards that apply to new marriages or in cases of deeming--are not included in this table. When no duration is specified for the disregards, they remain for the entire period of benefit receipt.

⁴ If benefits or employment end before the fourth consecutive month of earnings, the recipient is eligible to receive the $30 and 33.3 percent disregard for four additional months upon reapplication or re-employment. When a recipient has received the $30 and 33.3 percent disregard for four consecutive months and the $30 disregard for an additional eight months, neither disregard may be applied again until the individual has not received any benefits for 12 months.

⁵ The unit may disregard $160 per employed member.

⁸ Applicants with earned income who have passed the net income test and recipients who report a change in earned income are eligible for a 100 percent disregard for three months followed by a 75 percent disregard for three months.

¹⁰ Recipients are eligible for a one-time 100 percent disregard for the first six consecutive months of earnings if they find employment of 35 hours a week within the first 30 days of their initial approval for TANF. If work is not found within 30 days, the recipient is ineligible to ever receive the disregard again. An additional 100 percent disregard is available to units for three months when the unit's case is subject to closure because of increased earnings and the individual is employed for at least 25 hours a week at the federal minimum wage or higher. The recipient may not have already received the six-month disregard, unless there has been at least a 12-month break in receipt of TANF benefits. The three-month disregard may be received more than once during the 60-month TANF benefit period provided there is a period of at least 12 consecutive months in which a family does not receive TANF benefits before the family reapplies for assistance.

¹³ These disregards apply to individuals working 20 or more hours a week. Individuals employed fewer than 20 hours a week may disregard 100 percent in the first month of employment and 50 percent thereafter; however, if an individual's hours increase to 20 hours during the first six months, he or she may disregard 75 percent for the remainder of the six-month period. The 100 percent disregard is applicable only once every 12 months, even if employment is lost and then regained.

¹⁷ These disregards apply to individuals working full time, defined as 20 hours a week for recipients caring for a child under age 6 and 30 hours a week for all other recipients. Individuals working less than full time may disregard 100 percent of earnings for 3 consecutive months each 12-month period and $120 and 50 percent of the remainder thereafter. Regardless of the number of hours worked, the 100 percent disregard only applies to recipients who reside in units where all members have a combined monthly income less than or equal to $2,064 and do not remain eligible for cash assistance after all other disregards are applied to the payment standard.

¹⁸ The 50 percent disregard is available only once in a lifetime.

¹⁹ Once the recipient has received four months (they need not be consecutive) of the 90 percent disregard, he or she is not eligible to receive the disregard again until the TANF case has been denied and remains denied for one full month, and 12 calendar months have passed since the denial. The 12-month ineligibility period begins with the first full month of denial after the client used the fourth month of the 90 percent disregard.

² Two-parent units in which both parents are able to perform gainful activities will have their benefits reduced by 50 percent for July, August, and September.

⁸ This formula is for units with income. Units with no income receive the Maximum Benefit for their family size.

¹¹ When a caretaker marries while receiving assistance, he or she can choose to exclude the new spouse from the assistance unit for up to three months. If the new spouse is not included in the unit, none of his or her income or resources is counted for eligibility or benefit computation purposes. If the caretaker chooses to include the new spouse in the unit, all of his or her income is counted for eligibility and benefit computation calculations. After three months, the new spouse becomes a mandatory unit member and all of his or her income is considered in determining eligibility and benefit computation.

¹² The benefit for two-parent units equals the lesser of (150 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines minus net income), or (Standard of Assistance minus gross unearned income), or Maximum Benefit. For all units, the Maximum Benefit only limits benefits for units with six or more members.

⁴ This standard applies to recipients without earnings.

⁶ This standard applies to recipients with any earned income.

⁹ If a unit's combined JOBS Plus wages are less than the combined value of the unit's combined determined TANF and SNAP benefits, then the state will provide a wage supplement benefit to make up the difference. The benefit is equal to the greater of (A minus C or B minus D), where A equals the full benefit equivalent, the sum of TANF and SNAP benefits, calculated using normal rules. B equals the minimum benefit equivalent: A minus the difference between the payment standard for the unit including the JOBS Plus participant and payment standard for the unit not including the JOBS Plus participant. C equals the JOBS Plus participant's wage multiplied by his or her available hours to work (all scheduled hours, regardless of whether the participant worked those hours) minus $90 and the amount of garnishments withheld. Added to the remainder is child support received. D equals the JOBS Plus participant's wage multiplied by his or her actual worked hours minus $90 and the amount of garnishments withheld. Added to the remainder is child support received.

¹² The maximum benefit only applies to payments for units with nine or more members.

¹⁴ Recipients in TEMP receive wages from the TEMP employer; they do not receive cash payments from TANF.

⁴ The amounts shown include an additional $50 payment for units that pay their own shelter costs.

⁷ Families with a parent excluded due to immigrant status are not eligible for TANF or components of TANF.

⁵ Recipient may request voluntary protective payee as a basic delivery method.

⁹ ATM use is permitted in tobacco stores.

¹⁰ Texas only allows the use of TANF cash assistance to purchase goods and services deemed essential for the welfare of the family, which include: food, clothing, housing, utilities, furniture, transportation, telephone, laundry, medical supplies not paid by Medicaid, and incidentals such as household equipment, supplies, and recreation for children. Any locations not selling those goods and services, while not explicitly prohibited, are implicitly prohibited.

III. Activity Requirements

The tables in this chapter of the Databook describe requirements that individual members of an assistance unit must meet to become or remain eligible for assistance, as of July 1, 2020. To receive benefits, most states require recipients to negotiate and sign contracts detailing what is required of individuals within the unit. These requirements vary considerably by state but can include conditions for dependent children as well as conditions for the adult head of the household. All states' TANF programs include work requirements, as well as sanctions if work requirements are not met. During the COVID-19 pandemic, many states waived these requirements, suspended sanctions, and/or provided broad exemptions in response to stay at home orders that limited participants' ability to comply with the requirements. The tables in this chapter describe any changes made in response to the pandemic.⁴⁴

A. Once determined eligible, what must a recipient family do to maintain benefits?

States place various types of requirements on members of the assistance unit—including not only work requirements but also other types of behavioral requirements. For example, dependent children may be required to maintain a minimum grade point average in school, and adults may be required to keep current with immunizations for their children. Fulfilling behavioral requirements can be a condition of initial and continuing eligibility.

Behavioral Requirements and Bonuses (Table III.A.1)

Behavioral requirements affect adults and minor parents in many states. Requirements imposed on children may include school, immunization, health screening, and other health requirements. Table III.A.1 captures whether the following requirements and bonuses are imposed for either initial or continuing eligibility:

- School policies may require children to attend school or to achieve at least a minimum grade point average. This Databook addresses only the school requirements imposed on

- States may also offer a school bonus, which provides financial incentives for assistance units whose children meet specific attendance or achievement standards.
- Immunization policies require parents/caretakers to have their children immunized. Sometimes, proof of immunization for children is not required if they are enrolled in school because the school systems impose their own immunization requirements. Additionally, the immunization requirement may be waived if the immunization requirement might risk a child's health or violate a family's religious beliefs.
- Health screening requirements may include regular checkups for both children and adults, although the requirements usually apply only to children. Other health requirements primarily involve compliance with the rules of the Early and Periodic Screening, Diagnosis, and Treatment (EPSDT) program.

Requirements are only included in this table if (1) they are either explicitly mentioned in the state's TANF manual as a requirement for cash assistance or recipients must sign a contract including one of the requirements to receive benefits and (2) a sanction results from noncompliance. The dollar amounts of bonuses and the dollar amounts of sanctions for not complying with requirements are not included in the table but are available in the WRD. This table also captures behavioral requirement suspensions in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.⁴⁵

Standard policies from 2020 include:

- Thirty-seven states have some sort of school requirements recipients must follow to remain eligible.
- Twenty-four states have immunization requirements for recipients.
- Five states require health screenings for recipients.

Washington, DC: Office of Planning, Research, and Evaluation, Administration for Children and Families, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

B. What work activities are required?

Under the TANF block grant, the federal government requires states to (1) meet the annual work participation rates determined by the federal government and (2) ensure that every recipient is working (as defined by the state) as soon as the state determines he or she is able or after 24 months of benefit receipt, whichever is earlier.⁴⁶ States that do not meet the federal requirements may be sanctioned financially.⁴⁷ Within the context of the federal policies, states determine who is exempt from activities requirements, what activities are possible for non-exempt recipients, and what sanctions are imposed on individuals who do not comply with requirements.⁴⁸

Work-Related Activity Exemptions for Single-Parent Head of Unit (Table III.B.1)

States may, but are not required to, exempt certain individuals or groups from participating in work-related activities.⁴⁹ Table III.B.1 describes each state's rules for exempting a single-parent head of an assistance unit from work-related requirements. The table includes exemptions for individuals who are working a specified number of hours in an unsubsidized job, are ill or incapacitated, are caring for an ill or incapacitated person, are elderly, are in a specified month of pregnancy, or are caring for a child under a specified age. An additional column captures

exemptions from work-related activity requirements that were instituted in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.⁵⁰

Standard policies for 2020 include:

- Thirty-two states exempt single-parent unit heads from work requirements if they are ill or incapacitated.
- Eighteen states exempt single-parent unit heads from work requirements if they are 60 years or older, one state (New Jersey) exempts single-parent heads if they are 62 years or older, and six states exempt single-parent heads if they are 65 years or older.
- Eight states exempt single-parent unit heads from work requirements during some portion of a pregnancy.
- Three states (Colorado, Idaho, and New Mexico) do not allow any of the work-related activity exemptions shown in the table.

The exemptions shown in this table are the most common, but this list is not exhaustive. For other exemption criteria, see the WRD. Also, some states will consider some of these criteria as “good cause” for noncompliance, even if they do not provide an explicit exemption in these cases.

Related tables: See Table L6 for information about the exemptions for a parent caring for a young child for selected years from 1996 through 2020.

Work-Related Activity Requirements for Single-Parent Head of Unit (Table III.B.2)

Work programs vary widely from state to state based on several factors, including who must work, how much work is required, and what activities are considered work. Table III.B.2 provides a general overview of state activity requirements. The table describes when the recipient must begin participating, the activities that may be allowed, and how many hours the recipient must participate each week, including what share of those hours can be spent in education and training programs. Not all assistance units have the same work requirements. For simplicity, this table only includes the activities requirements for units headed by a single-parent 20 years old or older with children at least 6 years of age. Work activity requirements for other units may be found in the WRD. The table also captures activity requirement suspensions in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.⁵¹

Standard policies for 2020 include:

- Thirty-six states require single-parent unit heads to immediately meet work requirements upon benefit receipt.
- Forty states require single-parent unit heads to work a minimum of 30 hours per week.

This table should be interpreted as providing an overview of states' work-related activity policies rather than a full picture of those policies. In particular, caseworker manuals (which are the primary source documents for the WRD) do not generally indicate the likelihood that a recipient will be assigned to one activity or another. Thus, two states could have the same potential activities but have very different policies for how often different activities are assigned in practice. Alternatively, one state might include a potential activity not listed in another state's list but in practice rarely assign anyone to that activity. Despite these limitations, the table provides a starting point for understanding the range of work-related requirements across states.

Sanction Policies for Noncompliance with Work Requirements for Single-Parent Head of Unit (Table III.B.3)

If adults required to participate in activities do not comply with the requirements, the state can sanction the unit. States have discretion in defining what constitutes noncompliance and the consequences for noncompliance. Typically, if a recipient does not participate in his or her assigned activities for the specified number of hours, he or she is not complying and could be sanctioned. A sanction generally results in the removal of the noncompliant individual from the unit for benefit computation, a percentage reduction in the entire unit's benefit, a full benefit sanction, or complete case closure. A full benefit sanction results in the unit losing its entire benefit for some period, whereas a complete case closure often requires the applicant to reapply after the sanction period. Often states increase the severity of the sanction based on the number of times or the amount of time the individual is noncompliant.

Table III.B.3 describes sanction policies for failing to comply with work requirements. The table provides both the initial sanction (for the first instance of noncompliance) and the most severe sanction (after multiple instances of noncompliance). For both the initial and most severe sanctions, the table describes the amount of the reduction in benefits and the duration of the sanction. When the sanction is described as “adult portion of the benefit,” the state recomputes benefits using an assistance unit size that excludes the noncompliant adult. (If the adult has any income, some or all of it is deemed available to the children to prevent an increase in benefit.) When the sanction is instead described as “pro rata portion of the benefit,” the state reduces the benefit by one-half in the case of a two-person unit with a noncompliant member, by one-third in the case of a three-person unit with a noncompliant member, and so on.

The table includes two additional columns that describe sanction policies in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. Many states suspended or removed sanctions to support families who were unable to comply with activity requirements. If a state “suspended new sanctions,” individuals would not be newly sanctioned for failure to comply with activities requirements. When a state “lifted existing sanctions,” families had their active sanctions removed at the beginning of the pandemic and were allowed to receive benefits if otherwise eligible.⁵²

Standard policy highlights from 2020 include:

- Eleven states reduce the TANF benefit by a fixed percentage for the first case of noncompliance with work requirements. Eight states reduce the TANF benefit by removing the adult portion of the benefit for the first case of noncompliance with work requirements. Illinois reduces the adult portion of the benefit by 30 percent. Washington reduces the TANF benefit by the adult portion or 40 percent, whichever is greater.
- Thirty states close the TANF case as the most severe sanction for noncompliance with work requirements.

Work-Related Activity Requirements for Parents Outside the Unit and Nonparent Caretakers (Table III.B.4)

Parents and caretakers who are not included in the assistance unit are generally not required to engage in work-related activities. However, in some cases, adults who are not included in the assistance unit are still subject to work-related activity requirements, with variations in policy across states and by the reason that the adult is not in the unit. Nonparent caretakers who are in the assistance unit are generally required to participate in the same way as parents, but these policies vary across the states. Table III.B.4 shows the work-related activity requirements for parents who are not in the assistance unit due to immigrant status or due to time limits. The table also shows the policies for nonparent caretakers who are not in the assistance unit and for nonparent caretakers who are in the assistance unit. An additional column captures activity requirement suspensions in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.⁵³

Key policies for 2020 include:

- Thirty-seven states do not require parents outside the assistance unit due to immigrant status to participate in work requirements. Participation is required in 11 states and optional in three states.
- Among the four states in which a child-only unit may be created due to a family reaching a time limit, two states (Indiana and Oregon) require parents outside the assistance unit due to time limits to participate in work requirements, one state (Texas) offers parents outside the assistance unit due to time limits the option to participate in work requirements, and one state (California) does not require parents outside the assistance unit to participate in work requirements.

⁵³ For more information about states' policies in response to the pandemic, see Shantz, Katie, Linda Giannarelli, Ilham Dehry, Sarah Knowles, and Sarah Minton (2022). "State TANF Policies During the COVID-19 Pandemic" OPRE Report 2021-233. Washington, DC: Office of Planning, Research, and Evaluation, Administration for Children and Families, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

- Forty-nine states do not require nonparent caretakers outside the assistance unit to participate in work requirements; their participation is optional in two states (New York and Oklahoma).
- All of the 47 states that ever include a nonparent caretaker in the assistance unit require those caretakers to participate in work requirements.

² School requirements apply only to requirements for dependent children, not minor parents. A requirement is coded "Yes" if the state explicitly mentions it as a requirement for cash assistance or if it is included as a requirement in the recipient's contract and noncompliance results in a sanction. These policies may require children to attend school or to achieve a minimum grade point average; they may also require parents to be involved in their children's education in some way. The requirements may apply only to a subset of children; for additional detail, see the Welfare Rules Database.

- ⁴ Immunization requirements include information on standard immunizations for children. A requirement is coded "Yes" only if the state explicitly mentions it as a requirement for cash assistance or if it is included as a requirement in the recipient's contract and noncompliance results in a sanction.
- ⁵ Health screening requirements include information on regular checkups for both children and adults, although the requirements usually apply only to children. A requirement is coded "Yes" only if the state explicitly mentions it as a requirement for cash assistance or if it is included as a requirement in the recipient's contract and noncompliance results in a sanction.
- ⁶ The requirement to sign and comply with the Personal Responsibility Agreement was suspended from April 7, 2020 to June 30, 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Both the school requirements and immunization requirements are part of the Personal Responsibility Agreement.
- ⁷ The immunization requirement may be waived if the procedures would risk the child's health or violate the family's religious beliefs.
- ⁸ School bonuses apply to pregnant or teen parents under age 19.
- ⁹ School bonuses apply to minor parents under age 20.
- ¹⁰ The immunization requirement may be waived if the procedures would risk the child's health or violate the family's religious beliefs. Children are exempt from showing proof of required immunization if they are enrolled in school.
- ¹¹ The immunization requirement may be waived if the procedures would risk the child's health or violate the family's religious beliefs. Children are exempt from showing proof of required immunization if they are enrolled in school or daycare.
- ¹² Children are exempt from showing proof of required immunization if they are enrolled in school or enrolled in childcare.
- ¹³ The immunization requirement may be waived if the procedures would risk the child's health or violate the family's religious beliefs. Additionally, children under 2 months of age may also be exempt.
- ¹⁴ Children are exempt from showing proof of required immunization if they are enrolled in school. School-age children not attending school, being home-schooled, or attending a non-public school must provide proof of current immunizations.
- ¹⁵ Good cause for failure to meet behavioral requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic is determined on a case-by-case basis.
- ¹⁶ School bonuses apply to teen parents under age 20.
- ¹⁷ School bonuses are issued under the Learning, Earning, and Parenting (LEAP) program for teen custodial parents and pregnant teens under age 19 who have not obtained a high school diploma or equivalent.
- ¹⁸ Although school attendance is not a requirement for eligibility, caretaker relatives can be required, as an activity for self-sufficiency, to enroll and keep dependent children between the ages of 7 and 18 years who have not completed the 12th grade in school full time.
- ¹⁹ Case workers must request immunization records during the application interview but a unit's application is not rejected if they fail to provide immunization records. If a child is not properly immunized, the participant is referred to the Early and Periodic Screening Diagnosis and Treatment worker or healthcare provider. Children are exempt from showing proof of immunization if they are enrolled in school or a licensed day care provider.
- ²⁰ Participants are allowed a good cause exemption for failure to meet behavioral requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ²¹ Minor parents are potentially eligible for a school bonus if they are enrolled in the WIOA Youth program.
- ²² School bonuses only apply to teen parents aged 16 through 19. School bonuses are allowed at case manager discretion.
- ²³ The immunization requirement may be waived if the procedures would risk the child's health or violate the family's religious beliefs. Additionally, children are exempt from showing proof of required immunization if they are enrolled in school or a licensed day care provider.

² These columns capture the policies that were either in place as of July 2020 or that would have been in place except for a temporary change due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

³ An incapacitated person may be fully or partially exempt from work requirements.

- ⁴ A pregnant woman may qualify for an exemption if the pregnancy is disabling and prohibits her from participating in work or training programs.
- ⁵ State suspended sanctions for noncompliance with activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ⁶ While an incapacitated person may be fully or partially exempt from work activities, he or she is still required to develop a Family Self-Sufficiency Plan outlining the self-sufficiency activities in which he or she will participate.
- ⁷ If the incapacitated person is an adult, the caretaker is exempt only if he or she is related to the person and providing 24-hour care.
- ⁸ The state does not provide an exemption to participants aged 59 or older; however, this group may meet the state's criteria for good cause for noncompliance.
- ⁹ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. While the caretaker is exempt from work activities requirements, the recipient will still be required to develop a Family Self-Sufficiency Plan outlining the self-sufficiency activities in which he or she will participate.
- ¹⁰ The state suspended sanctions for noncompliance with activity requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ¹¹ To be exempt, the job must pay at least the minimum wage and be expected to last at least 30 days.
- ¹² Counties are given discretion to grant temporary exempt status when the recipient does not have adequate support services, such as transportation or child care. A review of the exemptions occurs at least every six months. SSI and SSDI recipients and individuals ineligible because of immigration status are exempt.
- ¹³ A parent loses this exemption after retaining it for 12 cumulative months. Months in which the parent is exempt because child care is unavailable for a child less than 12 months old also count toward the 12-month lifetime limit.
- ¹⁴ Months spent as a primary care provider for one child, birth to 23 months old, are exempt. For two-parent families, each parent has the option to receive the exemption but only one exemption can be granted at a time. An individual may only be eligible for this exemption one time. An exemption for care of an additional child six months of age or under is also available.
- ¹⁵ Counties have the option to vary some activities exemptions. These policies refer to Denver County.
- ¹⁶ The state does not consider these groups technically exempt, but they may meet the state's criteria for good cause for noncompliance or deferral.
- ¹⁷ A recipient caring for a child under the age of six who is unable to obtain child care may be exempt from work activities or sanctions.
- ¹⁸ A pregnant woman may qualify for an exemption if the pregnancy is disabling and prohibits her from participating in work or training programs. She may also be exempt from work requirements for six weeks postpartum.
- ¹⁹ The exemption applies only if the child is not subject to a family cap.
- ²⁰ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in an alternative component.
- ²¹ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime.
- ²² In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, individuals are placed in an alternative component that is exempt from employment-related activities requirements.
- ²³ Recipients in this component are automatically exempt from employment-related activities requirements. If recipients participate in the Transitional Work Program (TWP), they must develop an individualized transitional work plan with their case manager and comply with the activities requirements and deadlines established in the plan.
- ²⁴ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in the non-time-limited component. All individuals in this component are exempt from activities requirements.
- ²⁵ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in the non-time-limited component. All individuals in this component are exempt from activities requirements. To qualify for this exemption, the ill or incapacitated individual must be a direct relative, either a child or spouse, and living in the home.

- ²⁶ The hours apply to recipients with children age six or older. Recipients with children under six years old are required to work 20 hours in order to be exempt.
- ²⁷ Individuals are screened during assessment for physical or mental incapacities that interfere with their ability to participate in countable work activities. After a medical evaluation confirms incapacity, the client is moved from TANF to POWER. POWER requires limited work activities and has no time limits.
- ²⁸ The state does not consider these groups technically exempt, but they may meet the state's criteria for good cause for noncompliance. The individual must comply with prescribed course of treatment in order to resume participation.
- ²⁹ Recipients may be required to attend classes or other activities.
- ³¹ Single custodial parents can have one three-month exemption per child up to a cumulative total of 12 months.
- ³² Although not exempt, the state recognizes that recipients who are ill or incapacitated may not be able to participate fully. The amount of participation required from each recipient is determined on a case-by-case basis by a medical board. The recipient is also subject to sanctions for noncompliance with required activities that are described in their rehabilitation or treatment plan.
- ³³ To qualify for this exemption, the ill or incapacitated individual must be a direct relative, such as a child or spouse, and living in the home.
- ³⁴ Applicants are exempt from participation in activity requirements as a condition of eligibility due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Once approved to receive benefits, participants are no longer exempt from activity requirements.
- ³⁵ Pregnant women are not exempt, but they are considered to have a barrier to full-time employment for the six weeks before the due date and the 12 weeks after birth. The amount of participation required is determined case by case.
- ³⁶ A temporary good cause exemption from activity requirements was implemented prior to suspending activity requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ³⁷ Individuals who are eligible for Medicaid for the disabled or blind and individuals receiving Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) or other assistance due to disability are exempt.
- ³⁸ The state suspended activity requirements and sanctions for noncompliance with activity requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ³⁹ Although recipients are not exempt, they may be absent from work without sanction if they have a newborn child. Absence from activities is determined using the standards of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993. The maximum time available for one parent is 12 work weeks during any 12-month period.
- ⁴⁰ A parent providing constant care for a disabled family member for more than eight consecutive weeks is exempt, provided the disabled person lives in the home and does not attend school or participate in another activity full time. A parent caring for disabled family members for less than eight consecutive weeks has good cause for non-compliance but is not technically exempt.
- ⁴¹ Participants are granted good cause for non-compliance due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ⁴² To be exempt, an ill or incapacitated person must receive SSI or the head of household must be caring for a spouse who is receiving SSI.
- ⁴³ The need for the recipient to care for the disabled family member must be verified at least every six months by an acceptable medical or mental health source. The recipient is not considered to be personally providing care if the individual is a full-time student.
- ⁴⁴ To be exempt, the job must pay minimum wage or higher.
- ⁴⁵ Exemptions are limited to 12 months unless the individual has applied for SSI and the SSI application is approved, pending, or in appeal.
- ⁴⁶ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. A recipient caring for a child under the age of six who is unable to obtain child care may be exempt from work activities or sanctions.
- ⁴⁷ The state suspended activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

- ⁴⁸ Recipients in this component are automatically exempt from activities requirements.
- ⁴⁹ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in the exempt component. All individuals in this component are exempt from activities requirements.
- ⁵⁰ This exemption applies to parents whose youngest child is mandatory school age or older. If the youngest child is between two years old and mandatory full-time school age, 20 hours a week are required. Parents with children less than two years old are placed in the exempt component and do not have work requirements.
- ⁵¹ Recipients age 60 or older are placed in an alternative component.
- ⁵² Women who are pregnant and within 120 days of their expected due date are placed in an alternative component.
- ⁵³ Individuals caring for a child under two years old are placed in an alternative component.
- ⁵⁴ Participants are granted good cause for non-compliance due to the COVID-19 pandemic. If a client is unable to meet program requirements due to health and safety concerns or a lack of childcare related to COVID-19, they are granted good cause for 30 days.
- ⁵⁵ Individuals with a mental or physical illness, limitation, or incapacity that is expected to last more than 90 days and that prevents participation in employment activities are required to undergo a medical review. After the medical review, the individual may be determined disabled and required to apply for SSI or RSDI, work ready with limitations and referred to the work program, or work ready and referred to the work program.
- ⁵⁶ Women are exempt from activities requirements for two months after giving birth when the newborn is in the home or for postpartum recovery when the newborn is not in the home.
- ⁵⁷ Persons meeting this criterion will not be required to meet full participation requirements if the participant's condition significantly restricts his or her employment opportunities or ability to maintain suitable employment for at least 20 hours per week. The number of hours and the types of activities required will be determined on a case-by-case basis.
- ⁵⁸ While not explicitly exempt, a person meeting this criteria will not be required to meet full participation requirements if the participant's condition significantly restricts his or her range of employment opportunities or his or her ability to maintain suitable employment for at least 20 hours per week. The number of hours and the types of activities required will be determined on a case-by-case basis.
- ⁵⁹ If determined eligible for vocational rehabilitation, ill and incapacitated clients can be assigned to a work program activity.
- ⁶⁰ A pregnant woman may be exempt from work requirements for six weeks postpartum. A pregnant woman may qualify for an exemption if the pregnancy is disabling and prohibits her from participating in work or training programs.
- ⁶¹ Individuals caring for a newborn child may count this activity toward participation requirements for four full months following the child's birth month, up to a total of 12 months in an individual's lifetime. Individuals can choose not to participate in other work activities during this time.
- ⁶² Recipients age 65 and older are placed in an alternative component.
- ⁶³ Pregnant women will be placed in an alternative component the month before the month of their due date.
- ⁶⁴ Recipients caring for children under three months old are placed in an alternative component.
- ⁶⁵ Recipients caring for a child under three months old are exempt and are non-time-limited for the period of time they qualify for this exemption. This exemption can be extended under special circumstances.
- ⁶⁶ Recipients working 30 hours a week or more are exempt only from job training requirements. A single custodial parent with a child under age six must be employed a minimum of 20 hours a week to be exempt from job training requirements.
- ⁶⁷ A needy relative caregiver other than a parent is exempt at 60 years of age or older (parents are not exempt).

- ⁶⁸ A woman is exempt only when determined unable to work by a physician. The exemption applies only to job training requirements.
- ⁶⁹ Parents can have one three-month exemption per child up to a cumulative total of 12 months.
- ⁷⁰ Good cause for failure to meet activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic is determined on a case-by-case basis.
- ⁷¹ Recipients who are temporarily ill or incapacitated are exempt from work requirements for a six-month period with medical verification. Clients may apply for an additional six-month exemption, but will be required to apply for SSI or SSDI.
- ⁷² A pregnant woman with a verified medical condition that prevents participation follows the same exemption protocol as other clients with a temporary incapacity.
- ⁷³ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. If the recipient has exhausted this 12-month limit or has received 39 or more months of assistance prior to the birth of an additional child, the unit must participate in NHEP when the youngest child turns 12 weeks old.
- ⁷⁴ Recipients who are permanently ill or incapacitated are placed in the Family Assistance Program component. All individuals in this component are exempt from activities requirements.
- ⁷⁵ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in the Family Assistance Program component. All individuals in this component are exempt from activities requirements.
- ⁷⁶ Prior to the third trimester, recipients may be exempt if a physician certifies that a medical reason exists.
- ⁷⁷ There are no activity exemptions. Participants may request a limited work participation status reducing their required hours to no less than one hour per week. Individuals who have extraordinary circumstances may be granted a complete reduction of required hours.
- ⁷⁸ The state did not provide an exemption for activity requirements, but granted good cause for 30 days due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The good cause is re-evaluated every 30 days.
- ⁷⁹ A person may be exempt up to three months if supported by medical documentation.
- ⁸⁰ The exemption may last for no more than 12 months in a recipient's lifetime, and it may not last for more than three months for any one child unless the social services official makes a determination to extend the exemption for up to the total 12 months.
- ⁸¹ The state suspended mandatory in-person activity requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ⁸² A healthcare provider may limit the activities and participation hours for a disabled individual to less than 30 per week.
- ⁸³ An individual may be granted good cause from participation in work-related activities due to medical reasons, beginning with the sixth month of pregnancy through the month of birth. Once the child is born, the caretaker is exempt from participation for two months. However, the individual is subject to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime.
- ⁸⁴ To qualify for this exemption, the ill or incapacitated individual must be a family member living in the home full time and the disability must last a minimum of 30 days.
- ⁸⁵ Participants are granted good cause on a case-by-case basis for non-compliance due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ⁸⁶ Recipients of SSI, RSDI/SSDI, or other disability benefits that have the same standards of disability as defined by the Social Security Administration, or those determined likely to be eligible for SSI or SSDI benefits by a DHS approved provider or DHS designated staff, may be exempt.
- ⁸⁷ An applicant in her third trimester or a recipient in her third trimester who has documentation she cannot work may be exempt.
- ⁸⁸ Individuals with incapacities expected to last 90 days or longer are placed in the CARES program.
- ⁸⁹ Although technically not an exemption, an individual in the seventh month of pregnancy has legal cause for not meeting participation requirements.
- ⁹⁰ A parent personally providing care for his or her child under age one is expected to participate in the work program but cannot be sanctioned for failure to do so.

- ⁹¹ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in the CARES component. All individuals in this component are exempt from activities requirements.
- ⁹² The state does not consider these groups technically exempt, but they may meet the state's criteria for good cause for noncompliance or deferral if the condition is expected to last at least 30 days.

² These columns capture the policies that were either in place as of July 2020 or that would have been in place except for a temporary change due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

⁵ Recipients with children under 6 years old are only required to work 20 hours.

⁶ In cases where the caseworker determines that educational activities are necessary for a recipient to overcome barriers to employment, the limit on the number of hours that may be spent in education may be waived.

⁹ Counties have the option to vary their activity requirements. These policies refer to Denver County.

¹⁰ Colorado takes a two-generation approach to service delivery and grants excused absence hours for the act of being a working or participating parent (including taking a child to a doctor's appointment, attending a school activity, or attending other child-related activities). Recipients with children under 6 years old are only required to work 20 hours. Single parents under age 20 are also only required to work 20 hours.

¹¹ This applies to non-exempt recipients who are unemployed.

¹² Participation in required activities is required for two weeks prior to receipt of benefits.

¹³ Those who opt into the employment and training program defined by Senate Bill 101-1999 do not have a limit on their education hours as long as they are also participating in work or a work-related activity.

¹⁷ While recipients in this component do not have to participate in activities for a specific number of hours per week, they are expected to adhere to their employability plan, which may include a minimum hour requirement.

¹⁸ Recipients in this component do not have to participate in educational activities or meet a minimum hour requirement. However, their employability plan may include an activity requirement and a limitation on the number of education hours that count toward the requirement.

¹⁹ Recipients who are able to work 40 hours per week are required to do so. Recipients with children under 6 years old are only required to work 20 hours.

- ²² The state distinguishes between those with and without a high school diploma or GED. The requirements shown here are for TANF recipients who have obtained at least a high school diploma or GED.
- ²³ This applies to post-secondary education only.
- ²⁴ There is no limit on post-secondary education.
- ²⁵ Participation must be either equivalent to the level of commitment required for full-time employment or deemed significant enough to move the recipient toward full-time employment. Recipients with children under 6 years old are only required to work 20 hours.
- ²⁶ Single parents with children under age 6 are required to work a minimum of 20 hours per week.
- ²⁷ Participants are granted good cause for non-compliance due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ²⁸ Post-secondary education may be included if applicable, but does not count towards the required hours.
- ²⁹ The number of hours that may be spent in education and training is not capped for parents of children under 6 years old.
- ³⁰ The state requires recipients to work 40 hours, but recipients caring for a child age 6 or older are not sanctioned if working at least 30 hours, and recipients caring for a child under 6 years old are not sanctioned if working at least 20 hours.
- ³¹ Educational activities hours are counted after 24 hours are met with core activities.
- ³² Recipients in this component are not required to participate in work activities.
- ³³ Non-exempt adults are expected to use this 60-day period for job search prior to the imposition of work program requirements.
- ³⁴ Recipients with children under 6 years old are only required to work 20 hours. Recipients with children under 2 years old are placed in the exempt component and do not have work requirements.
- ³⁵ An education or training activity cannot exceed 24 months.
- ³⁶ Recipients with children under 6 years old are only required to work 21 hours.
- ³⁷ The requirement is imposed at 24 months or until the state determines the recipient is work ready, whichever is sooner.
- ³⁸ The unit may request for work-related activity requirements to begin on the first day of the month following the month of application.
- ³⁹ Recipients with children under 6 years old are only required to work 27 hours.
- ⁴⁰ The number of hours that may be spent in education and training is capped at two hours for parents of children under 6 years old.
- ⁴¹ Recipients in this component must be enrolled in at least 12 credit hours per semester and up to a maximum of 30 credit hours per year.
- ⁴² There is no hourly limit for vocational education, but recipients cannot count this as an allowable activity for more than 12 months.
- ⁴³ A recipient with a child under 6 years old is required to work 20 hours but may be required to work more if he or she is participating in unsubsidized employment, AWEF, or CWEP, does not face substantial barriers, and is meeting participation requirements.
- ⁴⁴ Individuals may count postsecondary education as core activities for 12 months with no limit on the hours per week. After 12 months as a core activity, there is a 10-hour limit. Certain types of basic or remedial education and English as a Second Language (ESL) can count towards the first 20 hours.
- ⁴⁵ Life skills training refers to the TANF Initiative for Parents (TIP), which offers parenting skills assistance to mothers of children under 12 months of age.
- ⁴⁶ Education Works program activities are focused on education and training; however, with program approval, participants may also take part in any other activity relevant to their education and pursuant to the New Mexico Works Cash Assistance Program.

⁵⁰ Post-secondary education only counts toward non-core hours.

⁵¹ There is no limit on high school or GED activities.

⁵² Participants are granted good cause on a case-by-case basis for non-compliance due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

⁵³ Individuals with reading test scores below third grade level or below sixth grade level, if the individual has very limited or no prior work experience, and individuals with very limited English language skills, may participate in educational activities for 30 hours per week minimum as part of an intensive work readiness program. There is no limit on post-secondary education.

⁵⁴ The state distinguishes between those with and without a high school diploma or GED and those with and without full-time employment. The requirements shown here are for TANF recipients who have obtained at least a high school diploma or GED and are not employed full time.

⁵⁵ Post-secondary education is an allowable activity for those who are not considered job-ready.

⁵⁸ Recipients with children under 6 years old are only required to work 20 hours. A participant at least 20 years old who is engaged in at least 15 hours per week of learning activities to obtain a diploma or GED, and who is making satisfactory progress, does not have to engage in other work-related activities for a period of up to 18 months. This is considered a deferment of work requirements.

⁵⁹ This limit does not apply to individuals who qualify for an education deferment. There is no hourly limit for vocational education, but recipients cannot count this as an allowable activity for more than 12 months. Participants who have used their 12 months of countable vocational education are eligible for a deferment if they are in a full time vocational training program, the total length of the program is two years or less, and the participant is within 12 months of completion.

⁶² Recipients with children under 6 years old are only required to work 20 hours. A participant at least 20 years old who is engaged in at least 15 hours per week of learning activities to obtain a diploma or GED, and who is making satisfactory progress, does not have to engage in other work-related activities for a period of up to six months. This is considered a deferment of work requirements.

⁶³ The allowable activities listed are for those in the CMU placement within the Unsubsidized Employment component. CMU participants may also participate in other activities that are determined to be appropriate at application. Those in the Case Management Job Ready (CMJ) placement may participate through basic or remedial education, high school/GED, English as a second language, job skills training, job readiness activities, job search, and life skills, while those in the Case Management Follow-up (CMF) and Case Management Follow-up Plus (CMF+) may participate through basic or remedial education, high school/GED, English as a second language, and unsubsidized employment.

⁶⁴ Those in the CMU and CMF placements within the Unsubsidized Employment component do not have a weekly minimum hour requirement. Those in the CMJ placement have a 30 hour requirement. Those in the CMF+ placement have a 30 hour work requirement in unsubsidized employment.

² These columns capture the policies that were either in place as of July 2020 or that would have been in place except for a temporary change due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

⁴ States that removed sanctions allow families with active sanctions to receive benefits if otherwise eligible.

- ⁵ This sanction applies to noncompliance that occurs during the first 24 months of assistance. For noncompliance that occurs after the first 24 months, the entire unit is ineligible for benefits for one month.
- ⁶ The needs of the sanctioned individual are not included for benefit calculation; however, the individual's income (after standard disregards) and assets are still included for eligibility and benefit calculation purposes. The individual is sanctioned until compliance. If the head is sanctioned, the benefit is issued to a protective payee. In a two-parent unit, the second parent will also lose his or her benefits unless he or she participates in activities requirements or is exempt from participation.
- ⁷ Participants are transitioned to alternative activities or granted an exemption or good cause for non-compliance due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ⁸ The state lifted in-process and existing sanctions. Participants are transitioned to alternative activities or granted an exemption or good cause for non-compliance due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ⁹ For recipients who have not reached the time limit, the entire assistance unit loses benefit eligibility for three months and must reapply for assistance after the sanction period. For recipients who have had their time limit extended, the entire assistance unit loses benefit eligibility for the remainder of the extension and does not qualify for additional extensions.
- ¹⁰ In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, individuals are placed in an alternative component that is exempt from employment-related activities requirements.
- ¹¹ Recipients in this component may participate in the Transitional Work Program (TWP). If they participate, they must develop an individualized transitional work plan with their case manager and comply with the activities requirements and deadlines established in the plan.
- ¹² Assistance may still be provided to children under age 16 in the unit; these benefits are issued to a protective payee (after the second and subsequent sanction).
- ¹³ Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, recipients with existing sanctions have the opportunity to cure their sanction by contacting the department and agreeing to cooperate.
- ¹⁴ A new application for TANF assistance may be required to reinstate eligibility.
- ¹⁵ The sanctioned parent must sign a new Family Investment Agreement and complete 20 hours of eligible education or work activities to become eligible again.
- ¹⁶ The state suspended existing sanctions if the failure to comply with activity requirements was due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ¹⁷ Participants are granted good cause for non-compliance due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ¹⁸ Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, recipients with existing sanctions have the opportunity to cure their sanction by contacting the department and agreeing to cooperate. If the recipient sought to cure their sanction and begin complying with the requirements but were unable to because of COVID-19 restrictions, then they were granted good cause.
- ¹⁹ Benefits to the sanctioned individual are terminated; however, the sanctioned parent's income (after disregards listed below) and assets are still included for eligibility and benefit calculation purposes. If the head is sanctioned, the benefit is issued to a protective payee. Disregards include an amount equal to the standard of need for support of non-categorically eligible dependents living in the household with the sanctioned parent, alimony and child support payments to persons outside the household, and payments to dependents of the sanctioned parent who live outside the household. If the unit head is sanctioned, the benefit is issued to a third-party payee. In determining benefit payment, only the income and assets of sanctioned parents are considered. Only the sanctioned stepparent's income (not assets) is considered. The income and assets of sanctioned individuals who are not parents or stepparents is excluded.
- ²⁰ To determine compliance, the unit must sign a Family Contract Amendment.
- ²¹ Participants with an existing sanction had their sanction lifted prior to case closure. Participants who had their case closed due to noncompliance with activity requirements in the previous month were not required to demonstrate compliance with activity requirements at re-application.
- ²² Recipients in this component are not required to participate in work activities; therefore, they are not subject to sanctions.

- ²³ An individual who demonstrates good cause will not be sanctioned for noncompliance with work requirements.
- ²⁴ The initial sanction does not reduce benefits. Recipients are given a written warning detailing the consequences of subsequent failures to comply.
- ²⁵ The unit is sanctioned for 10 weeks. The sanction ends when the participant completes four consecutive weeks of participation in work activities for an average of 30 hours per week in the 10 week period.
- ²⁶ The participant loses eligibility for the PAS program and the household loses benefits for up to six months.
- ²⁷ If the adult is compliant within two weeks, only the adult portion of the benefit is removed (this is referred to as the adjusted payment standard). If the adult is compliant within two to four weeks, the adjusted payment standard is reduced by one-third; if the adult is compliant within five to eight weeks, the adjusted payment standard is reduced by two-thirds. In addition, the case may also be closed if the adult is sanctioned for more than three months in any 12-month period (any portion of a month counts as one month).
- ²⁸ If a unit accrues three months of sanctions in any 12-month period, the case may be closed. Any portion of a month counts as one full month.
- ²⁹ The individual is placed on probationary status for the following school term to improve his or her grade point average or meet the educational institution's standards.
- ³⁰ If the participant is not complying with child support enforcement, school attendance, or reporting requirements in the New Mexico Works Program, the individual's Education Work Program case is closed and the individual is transitioned back to the New Mexico Works Program. If noncompliance stems from not meeting the educational institution's standards or having a GPA for the semester below 2.0, the program participant is placed on probation. If standards have not been met or an overall GPA of 2.0 has not been achieved by the end of the probationary period, the department may take action to terminate an individual's participation in the Education Works Program and transition the individual back to the New Mexico Works Program.
- ³¹ The assistance unit's benefit is reduced pro rata by the sanctioned individual's share; however, the individual's income (after standard disregards) and assets are still included for eligibility and benefit calculation purposes.
- ³² This policy applies to individuals who do not reside in a city with a population of one million or more individuals. For individuals who reside in a city of one million or more, the length of the sanction is until compliance with employment requirements, as assigned by the local district.
- ³³ Districts must not take negative action against applicants or recipients for non-compliance with an employment requirement that requires in-person contact. Districts may sanction individuals who fail to comply with assigned in-home employment activities.
- ³⁴ An individual may only request their durational sanction is lifted after the duration has ended and if the district does not have an appropriate in-home employment activity available. The individual may only be required to participate in an in-home activity to demonstrate compliance.
- ³⁵ The needs of the individual are not included for benefit calculation; however, the individual's income (after standard disregards) and assets are still included for eligibility and benefit calculation purposes. A sanction penalty runs from the effective date of the sanction through the last day of that month.
- ³⁶ If the adult is noncompliant for one month or less, only the adult portion of the benefit is removed. If noncompliance continues after one month of reduced benefits, the case is closed.
- ³⁷ The unit must be in compliance for at least 10 days but no longer than 30 days to reapply.
- ³⁸ A family may be eligible for TANF after less than two months if the sanction is applied in error, the individual that was sanctioned is JOBS exempt, the sanctioned individual leaves the household, or there was good cause for non-compliance. For three months after a TANF case is closed due to sanction, an individual must be in compliance for two consecutive weeks in order for the sanction to end.
- ³⁹ This sanction applies to noncompliance that occurs during the first 24 months of assistance. The benefit is reduced by the adult portion of the benefit for a minimum of 30 days or until the individual agrees to participate in RESET. For noncompliance that occurs after the first 24 months, the entire unit is ineligible for benefits for a minimum of 30 days or until the individual agrees to participate in RESET.

⁴² In a two-person unit, the adult portion is equal to the difference between the benefit that a family of three would receive and the benefit a family of two would receive. For all other family sizes, the adult portion is computed normally, using the difference between the family's current monthly benefit and the monthly benefit for a family size excluding the sanctioned adult. Benefits are restored on the first of the month following the month in which the unit came into compliance. If no work activity was previously assigned, the sanction ends on the day that the recipient agrees to participate.

⁴³ If a person is penalized and then becomes exempt, the benefits will be restored in the first full month following the month in which the state received documentation of the exemption.

⁴⁴ The unit must also complete a two-week trial participation period before it is eligible to receive benefits again.

⁵ A cell entry of "n.a." in this column means the state never allows non-parent caretakers to be a part of the assistance unit.

⁶ Parents who are excluded from the unit due to meeting the time limit under the IMPACT program, Indiana's employment and training program, must continue to cooperate with the work requirements and meet all other eligibility criteria in order for the assistance unit to continue receiving benefits.

⁸ Participants are granted good cause for non-compliance due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

⁹ Nonparent caretakers are only required to participate if they have children of their own in the unit.

¹⁰ A nonexempt parent residing in the same household as a child receiving assistance and who is receiving non-federal assistance may be required to participate in work activities up to 40 hours per week, unless otherwise limited.

¹¹ A nonexempt individual receiving assistance may be required to participate in work activities up to 40 hours per week, unless otherwise limited.

¹² The state suspended mandatory in-person activity requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

¹⁴ Participants are granted good cause on a case-by-case basis for non-compliance due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

¹⁵ Participants are not assigned to activities due to the COVID-19 pandemic, unless they are able to participate in remote activities.

IV. Ongoing Eligibility and Transitional Benefits

The tables in this chapter of the Databook describe key aspects of the rules that affect recipients' ongoing eligibility as of July 1, 2020. After a family applies for assistance and passes all eligibility tests, its members become recipients and a benefit is calculated. However, the recipients still face eligibility requirements that affect their ability to continue receiving benefits. States may impose income and asset tests on recipients, which generally differ from the initial eligibility tests for applicants. Having an additional child may or may not affect eligibility limits and benefits. States also impose time limits, which reduce or eliminate benefits to recipients based on their accumulated total months of benefit receipt. Additionally, states may provide some "transitional" cash benefit to families who are leaving TANF. The following four sections describe the requirements that affect ongoing eligibility and transitional assistance.

A. What eligibility tests must recipient families pass for continuing eligibility?

Like applicants, recipients must pass both nonfinancial and financial tests to remain eligible for assistance each month. The nonfinancial rules generally do not vary for applicants and recipients; however, for some rules, such as two-parent eligibility, they may. Unlike nonfinancial rules, the financial rules often differ for applicants and recipients. The following provides more information on two-parent hours tests, treatment of child support income, asset tests, income eligibility tests, and earned income disregards for recipient units, as well as the maximum amount a recipient can earn and remain eligible.

Eligibility Rules for Two-Parent, Nondisabled Recipient Units (Table IV.A.1)

In addition to the standard eligibility tests that all recipient units must pass, some states impose "hours tests" on two-parent units. Under an hours test, the unit is not eligible if the principal wage earner is working more than a specified number of hours per month. States may apply this rule when determining the initial or continuing eligibility of two-parent families. For states providing benefits to two-parent families, table IV.A.1 describes the hours test imposed on two-parent recipients where neither parent is disabled (“unemployed-parent” families, in the former AFDC program).⁵⁴ Policies for 2020 include:

- Forty-six states have no limit on hours worked per month for two-parent, nondisabled recipient units.
- Mississippi and South Dakota limit the hours worked in a month to 100.

Related tables: See table I.B.2 for details on the hours test for applicants and table L2 for information on the rules for two-parent units for selected years from 1996 through 2020.

TANF recipients are required to assign their child support income to the state. The state then decides what portion, if any, of the child support collected is counted for eligibility determination; what portion, if any, is transferred to the family as unearned income; and how much of the portion transferred to the family is counted as income in determining the benefit.⁵⁵ Table IV.A.2 describes each state’s treatment of child support income for recipients.

The first column of the table displays the amount of collected child support counted for recipients’ eligibility determination (regardless of whether any is transferred to the family). Those states that do not count child support collections for determining recipients’ eligibility typically establish some method to ensure that families with high and continuing child support amounts do not remain on TANF indefinitely. The second column of the table shows what portion of the collected child support is transferred to the family as unearned income, and the third column indicates how much of that transferred amount is disregarded for benefit computation. As an example, the $50 “pass-through” that was allowed under AFDC would be represented in this table with a “$50” coded in both the second and third columns; $50 is transferred to the unit as unearned income, and, of that amount, all $50 is disregarded for benefit computation.

⁵⁴ Louisiana, New Hampshire, and North Dakota no longer provide TANF benefits to two-parent, nondisabled units. Also, in some states, benefits are provided to two-parent units under solely state-funded or separate state programs funded by state monies rather than the TANF grant. The table includes those states as providing benefits to two-parent families regardless of the funding source.

⁵⁵ States are required to pay a share (equal to the state’s Medicaid match rate) of all child support collected on behalf of TANF recipients to the federal government. States may still provide all child support collected to the recipient; in that case, the state must use other funds to pay the federal share.

Key policies in place as of July 2020 include:

- Twenty-seven states consider at least a portion of the child support income collected by the state for purposes of a recipient’s eligibility.
- Twenty-four states do not transfer any portion of the child support collected to the family.

Asset Limits for Recipients and Related Assets Policies (Table IV.A.3)

States determine the maximum amount of assets—including vehicles and restricted assets—a family may hold and still remain eligible for benefits. Table IV.A.3 describes each state’s asset tests for recipients. The first column of the table provides the limit on the value of unrestricted assets a family may hold and still be eligible for assistance. Unrestricted assets include the cash value of any asset the state counts toward the limit, regardless of the asset’s purpose. The asset limits applied to determine a recipient’s ongoing eligibility may vary from limits applied to determine an applicant’s initial eligibility. In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, states may have temporarily increased or eliminated these limits for applicants and recipients.⁵⁶

The second column describes whether some or all of the value of a vehicle or vehicles is excluded in determining the amount of a family’s assets for eligibility purposes. When a portion of the vehicle’s value is exempted, the value may be given in terms of equity or fair-market value. The fair-market value is the amount for which the vehicle could be sold, while the equity value is the fair-market value minus any amount still owed on the vehicle. When a family still owes money on a vehicle, the equity value will be less than the fair-market value, so this distinction is important when comparing vehicle exemption amounts across states.

The last three columns describe programs that allow families to save money in a special account, often with no fees, sometimes with their savings matched with funds from the government or other entity (referred to as the match rate in the tables), and with some requirements placed on the uses of the funds. These programs may be available to non-TANF as well as TANF families, but even those not explicitly connected with the TANF program are shown in the table to provide a more complete picture of asset-related policies affecting TANF families. In states that limit the countable assets that families may have and still be eligible for

TANF, the funds in an account of this type are not counted against the asset limit. For example, a unit may be allowed to save money toward educational expenses or the purchase of a home without that money counting toward its overall asset limit. Some, but not all, restricted accounts are federally defined individual development accounts (IDAs). In the table, accounts that states specify as IDAs are distinguished from other restricted accounts.

Key policies from 2020 include:

- All but eight states have asset limits for recipients. For the states that do have asset limits for recipients, the limit ranges from $1,000 in Georgia, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Texas to $15,000 in Michigan.
- Forty-one states offer some type of restricted asset account.

Related tables: See tables L8 and L9 for information on asset rules in effect in selected years from 1996 through 2020. See table I.C.1 for the asset tests applied at application.

Income Eligibility Tests for Recipients (Table IV.A.4)

Table IV.A.4 describes income eligibility tests that states impose to determine whether a recipient (whose income might have increased since initial eligibility) is eligible to continue receiving benefits. The table indicates which state income standard is used for each test. Even if a family passes all eligibility tests, it is possible in some states that the family will not qualify for a positive benefit under the state's benefit computation formula. In those cases, the family will not receive a benefit. In some cases, states have streamlined their eligibility policies and do not perform any income tests other than the implicit test imposed by benefit computation. In these states, the table indicates "no explicit tests." Key policies for 2020 include:

- Twenty-eight states have an explicit net income, gross income, unearned income, or gross earnings test for recipients.
- Nine states require recipients to pass two or more income eligibility tests.
- Twenty-three states have no explicit income eligibility tests for recipients.

Related tables: To determine the value of the particular standard for a family size of three, see table I.E.3. Tables I.D.1, I.D.2, and I.D.4 describe policies concerning the deeming of income from grandparents, stepparents, and immigrant parents, table IV.A.2 shows the extent to which child support collections are counted in determining gross income for income eligibility tests, and appendix 2 captures the treatment of unemployment insurance income during the COVID-19 pandemic. Table IV.A.5 describes the earned income disregards used for the net income tests listed in IV.A.4. The tables in sections I.B, I.D, and II.A are also relevant to ongoing eligibility. In most states, recipients are required to pass both nonfinancial and financial tests to continue receiving benefits.

Earned Income Disregards for Continuing Income Eligibility Purposes (Table IV.A.5)

Table IV.A.5 describes the earned income disregards associated with the net income tests in table IV.A.4, which may differ from the amount of earnings disregarded for purposes of initial eligibility or from the amount of earnings disregarded for benefit computation. Policies for 2020 include:

- Ten states use earned income disregards for recipient eligibility purposes.
- All but one of the remaining states do not use an earned income disregard because they do not have an explicit net income test. In Oregon, recipients without earnings who are not in the JOBS Plus component face an explicit net income test, but it only includes unearned sources of income.

Related tables: Table I.E.2 contains the earned income disregards that apply to new TANF applicants for the purpose of determining their initial eligibility, and table II.A.1 gives the earned income disregards for benefit computation.

Maximum Income for Ongoing Eligibility for a Family of Three (Table IV.A.6)

Table IV.A.6 synthesizes the various financial rules related to ongoing eligibility to provide information on the maximum amount of income a family of three can earn and remain eligible for assistance in the 2nd, 7th, 13th, and 25th month of combining work and welfare. This calculation incorporates information on the income eligibility rules for recipients, earned income disregards for ongoing eligibility and benefit computation, benefit computation policies, and the eligibility and payment standards. The calculation determines the maximum amount of earnings a three-person family can have and still be technically eligible for assistance in each state, in each month. Technical eligibility does not mean the unit will necessarily receive a cash benefit—most states only distribute a cash benefit if it is over $10—but the unit will have passed all eligibility tests and be eligible for some positive amount.

The calculation assumes the assistance unit includes one parent and two children, has only earned income, has no child care expenses, contains no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for all shelter costs with no subsidies, and is subject to the benefit standard that applies to the majority of the state's caseload.

Policy highlights for 2020 include:

- The maximum earnings a recipient can have and remain eligible for assistance in month two ranges from $585 in Arizona to $3,620 in Indiana. Five states have no maximum in the second month.
- In 15 states, the maximum earnings allowed are lower at the 25-month point (the latest month shown in the table) compared with maximum possible earnings in the 2nd month.

Related tables: Table I.E.4 provides information on the amount an applicant may earn and be eligible for assistance. Table L3 displays how much an applicant may earn and be initially eligible for selected years from 1996 through 2020.

B. Are children eligible if born while the family receives benefits?

Benefits to recipients who give birth to a child while receiving aid may or may not be affected by the addition of the child to the assistance unit. A type of policy often referred to as a “family cap” prevents or limits an increase in a family’s benefit when another child is born. In the states with this type of policy, the benefit increase an assistance unit would otherwise receive for adding another member to the unit is limited.

Family Cap Policies (Table IV.B.1)

Table IV.B.1 describes states’ family cap policies. The table first indicates whether the state imposes a family cap, then provides the number of months following the case opening after which a newborn child is excluded from the assistance unit. The table also describes the impact on the benefit when an additional child is born (whether there is no increase in benefit or some increase smaller than what would occur in the absence of a family cap). In some cases, the amount of cash paid directly to the family does not increase, but the increment that would have been paid in the absence of the policy is instead paid to a third party or provided in the form of a voucher. That information is noted in the table as “none (voucher)” and is explained further in the footnotes. States with “none (disregard)” displayed in the table increase the earned income disregards for families that have a capped child; again, more details are provided in the footnotes. The table also indicates how long a cap, once applied, endures. The table indicates “always capped” if a family is never able to regain benefits for a capped child, even after the case has been closed for a period. Otherwise, the table provides the number of months a family must remain off TANF for the cap to be removed—that is, for the child to be included in the benefit computation should the family apply for assistance again. Policies for 2020 include:

- Twelve states have a family cap policy.
- For the states with family cap policies, seven states do not increase the cash benefit for an additional child born to the unit. Arizona allows an additional earned income disregard for each month the unit member is excluded, equal to the lost benefit amount for units subject to the family cap. South Carolina provides benefits through vouchers up to the amount of increase in cash benefits the unit would have received for the child.
- Three states (Connecticut, Florida, and Georgia) do increase the benefit, but at less than the normal increment.
- Nine states will not remove the special treatment of the capped child after the family’s case has been closed for a specified number of months. Of the three states that discontinue special treatment after case closure, a family’s case must have been closed anywhere between 1 month in Tennessee to 12 months in North Dakota in order for the state to remove the family cap.

Related tables: See table L10 for information on states’ family cap policies in selected years from 1996 through 2020.

C. How long can a family receive benefits?

Since the passage of PRWORA, assistance units that include adults have generally been able to receive no more than 60 months of federally-funded TANF aid. Therefore, most states have limited the number of months an assistance unit that includes adults may receive benefits. (Child-only units are generally not subject to time limits.)

States impose two basic types of limits on recipients: (1) lifetime limits (either the federal 60-month limit or a shorter state-determined limit), which permanently eliminate the entire benefit, or (2) other intermittent state time limits (periodic time limits, benefit waiting periods, or benefit reduction time limits), which interrupt or reduce benefits for a certain period but do not eliminate them entirely. Both types of time limits may terminate benefits to the entire unit or just the adults in the unit. In addition, while some states impose only the 60-month federal lifetime limits or only other state time limits, other states impose a combination of the two types.

Not all assistance units are subject to time limits. States may continue to provide federally-funded benefits to up to 20 percent of their caseload (referred to as the “hardship exemption”) beyond the federal 60-month time limit.⁵⁷ Exactly which families are eligible to receive this extension of benefits (which adds months of assistance after reaching the federal lifetime limit) varies by state. Families who receive a hardship exemption remain eligible as long as the circumstances that led to their extension continue to exist. In addition, states may use state-only funds to provide various exemptions (which stop the time limit clock from accruing months towards the 60-month lifetime limit) or extensions (which extend assistance beyond 60 months).

Time Limit Policies (Table IV.C.1)

Under TANF, the federal government imposed a maximum 60-month lifetime limit on receipt of TANF funds by families with an adult. Therefore, a family is generally no longer eligible for federal cash assistance if an adult family member has received federally-funded TANF assistance for 60 months, either consecutively or nonconsecutively.⁵⁸ Some states have adopted shorter lifetime limits, while others have chosen to fund recipients after the 60 months with state dollars. States may also choose to terminate benefits only for the adults in the unit, in which case all children in the assistance unit remain eligible for benefits as a child-only unit after the lifetime limit expires.

The first four columns of table IV.C.1 describe states’ lifetime limit policies.⁵⁹ The first column indicates the total months in which the state allows benefits, and the second, third, and fourth columns identify whose benefits are terminated. The final column describes policies in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. If a state suspended time limits, families do not accrue months or cannot be newly terminated due to reaching the time limit. In states that removed time limits, families that have already reached the time limit may reapply and receive benefits if otherwise eligible.⁶⁰

⁵⁹ This table describes time limit policies that apply to units with an adult in the assistance unit.

Standard policies for lifetime time limits in 2020 include:

- Thirty-six states have a lifetime limit of 60 months.
- In states with time limits, 47 states terminate the benefit for the entire unit once the time limit is reached. Two states (California and Oregon) terminate the benefit for the adult only. Indiana terminates the benefit for the adult only once the benefit reduction time limit is reached and for the entire unit once the lifetime limit is reached.

States have developed several other time limits that interrupt or reduce benefits. These limits are imposed instead of or in addition to the lifetime limits and include periodic limits and benefit waiting periods. Under a periodic limit, a unit (or the head of the unit) may receive benefits for only a specified number of months in a given period. For example, a state might impose a 12-out-of-24-month periodic limit on the unit, in which the unit is eligible to receive only 12 months of benefits in any 24-month period. Under a benefit waiting period, a unit (or the head of the unit) is ineligible for benefits for a specified number of months after the unit has received benefits for another specified number of months. To use the 12 and 24 example again, a unit may receive 12 months of assistance and is then ineligible for 24 months. This means the unit may receive 12 months of benefits over any period, but after it receives its 12th month of assistance, it will be ineligible for benefits for the next 24 months. Both the periodic limit and the benefit waiting period limit may apply to the entire unit or just the adult head of the unit. The intermittent time limit columns of table IV.C.1 describe other state time limit policies. The first of these columns describes the type of other time limit imposed, and the second and third columns identify whose benefits are terminated. Policies for intermittent time limits in 2020 include:

- Eight states have time limit policies other than lifetime limit policies. Of those eight states, three impose a periodic time limit and five impose a benefit waiting period.
- Seven states terminate the benefit for the entire unit once this non-lifetime time limit is reached and one state (Texas) terminates the benefit for the adult only.

Time Limit Exemption and Extension Policies (Tables IV.C.2(a) and (b) and IV.C.3(a) and (b))

Exemption and extension policies are important for understanding time limits in the states. Exemptions and extensions could significantly increase the number of months beyond the state or federal time limit that an assistance unit may receive benefits and, depending on the criteria, could impact a substantial portion of a state's caseload. As defined for the purposes of the WRD, exemptions are policies that stop a recipient's time-limit "clock" before it reaches the 60-month limit, and extensions are policies that prolong a recipient's eligibility once the unit has reached the 60-month time limit.

Tables IV.C.2(a) and (b) and IV.C.3(a) and (b) describe time limit exemption and extension policies, respectively. The exemption and extension policies for both lifetime limits and other limits are displayed in the tables. If the policies vary depending on the type of time limit, the differences in the policies are described in the tables' footnotes. The funding source for benefits received under an exemption or extension may vary between federal and state funds. Families receiving an exemption from the time limit are assumed to be funded with state-only dollars. Families receiving an extension may be funded with federal dollars if they meet the federal "hardship exemption" criteria as described above; however, states may also use their own funding for other extensions. In some cases, a state may use its own funds to provide an exemption or extension in a manner not permitted by federal TANF rules. For example, several states allowed an exemption or extension for months during the COVID-19 pandemic.⁶¹ Any policies in the tables that conflict with federal TANF requirements are assumed to use other funding. Similarly, states that provide extensions for all families after reaching the 60-month federal time limit are assumed to be using non-federal funds.

Standard time limit exemption and extension policies for 2020 include:

- Forty states provide time limit exemptions for at least one of the circumstances listed in the tables.

⁶¹ For more information about states' policies in response to the pandemic, see Shantz, Katie, Linda Giannarelli, Ilham Dehry, Sarah Knowles, and Sarah Minton (2022). "State TANF Policies During the COVID-19 Pandemic" OPRE Report 2021-233. Washington, DC: Office of Planning, Research, and Evaluation, Administration for Children and Families, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

- Forty-seven states provide time limit extensions in at least some cases shown in the tables.

Related tables: Table IV.C.1 describes the time limit policies for each state.

D. What happens after cash assistance ends?

While some families might lose TANF eligibility after reaching a state or federal time limit, other families might become ineligible due to other circumstances, such as increased earnings. Several states elect to provide a transitional cash benefit to these families.

Transitional Cash Benefits (Table IV.D.1)

Table IV.D.1 describes state policies for providing continued cash benefits to families transitioning off the TANF program, usually due to increased work and earnings. The table captures only those transitional benefits paid as cash. (Some transitional benefits are in the form of increases in supplemental food benefits.) Also, the table only captures benefits provided to families who previously received TANF; it does not capture benefits directed more broadly at working families regardless of prior TANF receipt. The table first describes whether a state provides a transitional cash benefit and the hours of work required for participants to receive it. It also displays the monthly benefit amount and the length of time a family can receive this benefit.

Key policies for 2020 include:

- Twenty-five states provide transitional cash benefits with time limits that range from 1 month in South Dakota and Washington to 24 months in Arkansas, New Jersey, and New York.

Additional details on these rules and information on other transitional benefits—such as transitional child care benefits—can be found in the WRD.

⁸ For income eligibility for an extension, all child support income, including the disregard, is counted.

¹⁴ After the initial $50 transfer, the state then transfers child support in the amount of the unmet need, also known as the gap payment, to the family as unearned income and disregards the child support for benefit determination. The unmet need is calculated as the consolidated need standard for the unit's family size minus the maximum benefit for the unit's family size minus the unit's net income.

¹⁵ The transferred amount is considered to be an addition to the TANF payment.

¹⁶ The unmet need, also called the gap payment, is calculated as 63.7 percent of the smaller of retained child support for the month or the maximum amount that would not make the family ineligible for TANF if counted as income. The state defines "retained child support" as the amount equal to the smaller of the current month's collection, the basic TANF award for the month, or the current monthly obligation excluding arrears.

¹⁷ The state will add to the TANF payment the smaller of the court-ordered payment amount, the amount the Office of the Attorney General received during that month, or $75. The transferred amount is considered to be an addition to the TANF payment and is disregarded for eligibility purposes.

⁸ Vehicles are exempt if used for one of the following: (1) to meet the family's basic needs, such as getting food and medical care or other essentials; (2) to go to and from work, school, training, or work activity (such as job search or community service); (3) as the family's house; (4) to produce self-employment income; or (5) to transport a disabled family member, whether or not he or she is a part of the assistance unit. If the vehicle does not meet one of these requirements, the equity value of the vehicle is counted in the determination of resources.

¹⁷ A single-parent unit may exempt $4,650 of the vehicle's equity value if it is used for job search or to travel to work or education and training. Otherwise, $1,500 of the equity value may be excluded. A two-parent unit may exempt $4,650 of the equity value of two vehicles. The vehicle is completely excluded if it is used more than 50 percent of the time to produce income or as a dwelling.

¹⁸ Funds in an IDA may also be matched on behalf of the individual by a qualified entity, which may be defined as one of the following: a specific not-for-profit organization, or Georgia state or local government acting in cooperation with a not-for-profit organization.

²⁰ The asset limit for applicants is $1,000.

²¹ Funds are matched up to the first $400 an individual deposited into the individual's account during the preceding 12 months for 4 years. If the amount appropriated is insufficient to make the deposits required by this section for accounts that have been established, the authority will proportionately reduce the amounts allocated to and deposited into each account.

²⁴ The state matches $0.50 for every dollar of a recipient's assets; federal funds match another $0.50.

²⁸ Community agencies will contribute matching funds up to $2,000 a year.

³² Recreational vehicles are not exempt. If a vehicle is non-exempt, its equity value counts toward the asset limit. Additionally, industrial vehicles—heavy haulers, pulpwood trucks, etc.—are exempt as long as they are used for income-producing purposes over 50 percent of the time, or as long as they annually produce income consistent with their fair-market value. Determination of whether to count non-recreational vehicles is made on a case-by-case basis.

³⁴ Match rates are set by the contractor and can be any rate up to the maximum of 3:1.

³⁶ The entire vehicle is exempt only if used for employment, training, medical transportation, or as a home. If a unit has more than one vehicle that meets the exemption criteria, only the vehicle with the greatest equity value will be exempt.

³⁷ The equity value of any additional non-exempt, non-junk vehicles counts toward the asset limit.

³⁹ Recreational vehicles are not exempt and are evaluated for fair market value.

⁴⁴ In addition to the IDA account, recipients may exempt up to $4,650 for the purchase of a first or replacement vehicle that will be used to seek, obtain, or maintain employment. The funds must be kept in a separate bank account from the IDA savings. Recipients may also exempt up to $2,000 for trust funds for infants and up to $1,400 in a separate account dedicated to paying tuition at a two-year or four-year accredited post-secondary educational institution.

⁴⁹ Although the asset limit is $4,000, the unit may only save $2,000 in an IDA and $2,000 in the Savings for Education, Entrepreneurship, and Down payment (SEED) accounts, which are savings accounts for individuals age 13 through 18 and are dedicated for purposes such as postsecondary education or training expenses, purchase of a first home, or capitalization of a small business.

- ⁵⁰ The limit is reduced to $2,500 if the recipient does not cooperate with his or her case plan. The asset limit for applicants is $2,500. During the COVID-19 pandemic, the asset limit is $10,000 for new applicants and all recipients.
- ⁵¹ The limit is reduced to $2,500 if the recipient does not cooperate with his or her case plan. JOBS Plus and JOBS participants must first be deemed eligible under normal rules. The asset limit for applicants is $2,500. During the COVID-19 pandemic, the asset limit is $10,000 for new applicants and all recipients.
- ⁵² The participant's employer contributes one dollar for every hour the participant works.
- ⁵³ One vehicle with an equity value less than $40,000 is exempt per household. Vehicles with the equity value of at least $40,000 and any additional non-exempt vehicles count toward the asset limit.
- ⁵⁴ The Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development will contribute matching funds up to $1,000 a year. Non-IDA postsecondary education savings accounts are not subject to a match rate.
- ⁵⁵ Exemptions for adult drivers cannot exceed two vehicles per household. However, the household may also exempt the entire value of a vehicle that is used primarily to transport a disabled family member, to produce income, or as the family's home.
- ⁵⁶ Vehicles owned by or used to transport disabled individuals, vehicles essential to self-employment, income-producing vehicles, and vehicles used as a home are also exempt. The equity value of any additional non-exempt vehicles counts toward the asset limit.
- ⁵⁷ In addition to one primary vehicle, an assistance unit may totally exclude a vehicle used to transport water or fuel to the home when it is not piped in, a vehicle used to transport a disabled member or SSI recipient in the household, or a vehicle used in producing income or as a home. An assistance unit may also exclude $4,650 of the fair-market value of a vehicle used to transport members of the unit, obtain or continue employment, or attend school or training.
- ⁵⁸ Local banks, churches, or IDA non-profit sponsors will contribute matching funds from rates of 1 to 1 up to 9 to 1.
- ⁵⁹ All licensed vehicles used for income-producing purposes or for transporting a disabled household member are exempt.
- ⁶⁰ Only deposits from earnings or EITCs are disregarded. Any withdrawals from an IDA account made for non-allowable purposes are counted as resources. In addition to the IDA account, recipients may exempt up to $11,896 in School-Based Savings Accounts.
- ⁶¹ This state has no assets test and therefore no limit on assets; the IDA accounts shown here reflect that the state offers this type of saving method, but it does not affect TANF benefits.
- ⁶² The entire equity value of a vehicle used to transport a disabled household member is also exempt. The vehicle exemption for applicants is $5,000.
- ⁶³ Recipients can earn up to $4,000 in matched funds.
- ⁶⁴ Funds in an IDA may be matched on behalf of the individual by a qualified entity, including community service providers, for a qualified purpose.
- ⁶⁵ A person must be work-eligible to qualify for the vehicle exemption.
- ⁶⁶ The IDA program is matched with program funds from the Assets for Independence Act (AFIA). The match rate is dependent on the agreement with the participating agency.

² If benefits or employment end before the fourth consecutive month of earnings, the recipient is eligible to receive the $30 and 33.3 percent disregard for four additional months upon reapplication or re-employment. When a recipient has received the $30 and 33.3 percent disregard for four consecutive months and the $30 disregard for an additional eight months, neither disregard may be applied again until the individual has not received any benefits for 12 months. When monthly wages are $90 or less, and net income equals zero before any part of the $30 and 33.3 percent disregard can be applied, the month does not count toward the four consecutive-month limit for receiving the $30 and 33.3 percent disregard and the recipient is eligible to receive the disregard for four additional months.

¹The values in this table represent the maximum amount a recipient can earn in various months of combining work and TANF and still be "technically eligible" for assistance in each state. Technical eligibility does not mean that the unit will necessarily receive a cash benefit, but it will have passed all the eligibility tests and is eligible for some positive amount. Most states only distribute a cash benefit equaling $10 or more. Ongoing eligibility is calculated assuming that the unit found new employment in the first month of assistance, has only earned income, has no child care expenses, contains one adult and no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for shelter, and lives in the most populated area of the state.

⁸ If the family reapplies for assistance after a break of six or more continuous months, the family cap will apply again to any child born more than 10 months from the date of reapplication, and there will be no increase in the benefit.

⁹ The additional child increases the standard of need but not the family maximum. If the family has no income, the cash benefit will not increase. However, if the family has income, the benefit may increase, but cannot increase higher than the maximum payment for the family size excluding the capped child.

¹⁰ The state provides a flat maximum benefit, regardless of family size.

¹² The family cap does not apply to adoptees or to parents receiving assistance from another state.

¹⁴ The family cap will continue until the case is closed. If the case is reopened, the cap is discontinued unless the case was closed for noncooperation with child support requirements or noncompliance with the work activity requirement.

¹ This table describes time limit policies that apply to units with an adult in the assistance unit.

² These columns capture the policies that were either in place as of July 2020 or that would have been in place except for a temporary change due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

³ Families may qualify for exemptions from or extensions to the time limit. See tables IV.C.2(a), IV.C.2(b), IV.C.3(a), and IV.C.3(b) for details about state exemption and extension policies.

⁴ In certain circumstances, a child may be able to continue receiving benefits after the 60 months. Because the time limit generally follows the adult, a child may enter a new household and become eligible in a new assistance unit.

⁵ If a state suspended time limits, families do not accrue months or cannot be newly terminated due to reaching the time limit. In states that removed time limits, families that have already reached the time limit may reapply and receive benefits if otherwise eligible.

¹³ When there is more than one adult in the family, the adult with the greatest number of months of participation must be used to determine when the family reaches the time limit.

¹⁴ This time limit applies to adults who are required to participate in work-related activities. The income of the time-limited adult is still counted in determining the unit's benefits; however, his or her needs are not included when determining the unit's benefits. The time-limited adult is still considered a recipient, and months in which the adult's needs are excluded while the rest of the unit continues to receive a benefit may be counted for purposes of the 60-month lifetime limit.

¹⁶ If either parent in a two parent family surpasses the limit, benefits are terminated for the entire family.

¹⁹ Recipients in the Education Works Program can continue to receive assistance for up to two additional academic terms following the 24-month time limit if the extension will result in the recipient earning a degree but they may not receive more than 36 total months of assistance.

²¹ Ohio has a 36-month limit on assistance. However, units are eligible for additional assistance, up to the federal time limit of 60 months, through either a hardship or good cause extension. For good cause, a unit must have been ineligible for 24 months and show good cause for reapplying in order to receive additional assistance.

²² If clients marry with different months of assistance, the number of months counted towards the time limit will be the higher of the two. If a marriage dissolves, the number of countable months of the two-parent unit will be the same if the parents reapply for assistance regardless of months earned prior to the marriage.

²³ The 12-month limit applies to nonexempt recipients who (1) did not complete the 11th grade and have 18 months or more of recent work experience or (2) have a high school diploma or GED, a certificate from a postsecondary school, or a certificate or degree from a vocational or technical school and any work experience. The 24-month limit applies to nonexempt recipients who (1) did not complete the 11th grade and have between 6 and 17 months of recent work experience or (2) completed the 11th grade but not the 12th grade or have a GED, and have completed 17 or fewer months of work experience. The 36-month limit applies to nonexempt recipients who have less than six months of recent work experience and did not complete the 11th grade.

²⁴ Families with two parents who are each capable of earning at least $500 per month are eligible for only seven months of assistance in any 13-month period.

²⁵ Recipients will be ineligible for assistance for two months if their grant has been terminated for either noncompliance or not fulfilling the work requirement, without good cause, after the 60th month of assistance.

²⁶ After receiving 24 months of assistance, the unit may receive up to 12 months of transitional benefits. The 24 months of ineligibility begins with the month in which the case was closed or in the month transitional benefits were terminated, whichever is later.

¹ Exemption policies apply to months in which the state does not count a month of assistance toward the state's time limit (or "stops the clock"). These policies are potential exemptions and may not be granted to all that are eligible. In most states, caseworkers have discretion in applying the exemptions. If a state has multiple time limits (for example, a periodic limit and a lifetime limit) and applies the exemption policies differently to the time limits, the differences are footnoted. In almost all states, time limits apply only to months when adults receive what is considered TANF assistance, which includes all regular monthly cash aid and some other types of help. Some types of aid considered non-assistance are subsidized jobs programs and child care and transportation help for employed families. Months in which only non-assistance is received are always exempt from the TANF time limits. See section 260.31 of the final TANF rule for more information on assistance and non-assistance. The federal government requires that states disregard months during which an adult lived on a Native American reservation or in an Alaskan Native village with an adult unemployment rate of at least 50 percent. Furthermore, since time limits generally only apply to families that include adults (or minor heads of household), months in which an adult received assistance as a dependent child do not count. Many states exempt months in which a unit receives diversion payments. These policies are captured in table I.A.1. For information on whether months of receipt of transitional cash benefits (for families leaving TANF with employment) are counted or exempted, see the full database. This table focuses on the exemption rules in place as of July 2020. Rules may have differed for months of assistance received previously. Past policies are mentioned if they exempted a substantial part of the caseload for certain past time periods under TANF.

³ Months in which the person has been incapacitated for at least 30 days are exempt.

⁵ Certain recipients who have received 20 months of benefits and are determined unemployable (age 40 or older, unemployed, have not completed grade six, and have not been employed over six months in the past five years) may be exempt from the time limit.

⁶ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in an alternative component that is exempt from time limits.

⁸ Recipients are exempt from time limits.

⁹ The head of a one-parent unit must work 30 hours a week, while both parents of a two-parent unit must work a combined total of 35 hours a week to receive the exemption. This exemption applies to the lifetime limit.

- ¹⁰ The ill, incapacitated, or disabled person must be a related child under age 18 or a spouse. Months in which the family has a disabled child in the home approved for a waiver under the Home and Community-Based Care Program are also exempt.
- ¹¹ This exemption applies to the benefit reduction limit.
- ¹² This exemption applies to the periodic time limit.
- ¹³ Persons who are ill or incapacitated must have a pending SSI application or appeal in process in order to be exempt from the time limit.
- ¹⁴ The recipient must be incapacitated for more than 90 days.
- ¹⁵ The exemption applies when caring for a child or spouse.
- ¹⁶ Recipients exempt for disability must be permanently disabled as determined by OASDI, SSI, SSDI, or employer-sponsored disability insurance. This includes a pending application or receipt of these benefits. A recipient can also receive the exemption if the Medical Review Team determines the individual will be disabled for 12 months or more.
- ¹⁷ To meet this exemption, there must be no other satisfactory alternative plan or care available.
- ¹⁸ The recipient must apply for disability benefits before a second six-month extension can be approved. Individuals who are unable to work due to physical or mental disability are later placed in the Family Assistance Program which does not have time limits.
- ¹⁹ This state continues to fund families beyond 60 months of benefit receipt using state funding. However, the state may exempt certain months in calculating the number of federally-funded months of assistance.
- ²⁰ This exemption applies to the benefit waiting period.
- ²¹ People with a disability and receiving SSI are always exempted; people who are incapacitated who do not receive SSI may request an exemption.
- ²² Months with this characteristic are exempt from work activities. When people are exempt from work activities (and do not volunteer to participate), those months are exempt from the benefit waiting period.
- ²³ Recipients in this component are exempt from the benefit waiting period but not the lifetime limit. The criteria for inclusion in this component may include some of the exemptions listed in this table. For exemptions that are not relevant to the criteria for inclusion in this component, n.a. is listed.
- ²⁴ Units with this characteristic are placed in this component and are therefore exempt from the benefit waiting period. Participants who have a temporary illness, incapacity, or disability are still subject to the lifetime limit, while SSI recipients are exempt from the lifetime limit.
- ²⁵ Units with this characteristic are placed in this component and are therefore exempt from the benefit waiting period, but their months still count for the lifetime limit.
- ²⁶ Units may be enrolled in W-2T, CSJ, and/or TEMP for a combined total of 60 months. Units may participate in W-2T, CSJ, and/or TEMP for 24 cumulative months each. Months in UE do not count towards the 60-month limit.
- ²⁷ Recipients in the TEMP component are exempt from the federal lifetime limit.
- ²⁸ Recipients in this component do not have their months counted toward the federal, state, or placement lifetime limits.

¹ Exemption policies apply to months in which the state does not count a month of assistance toward the state's time limit (or "stops the clock"). These policies are potential exemptions and may not be granted to all that are eligible. In most states, caseworkers have discretion in applying the exemptions. If a state has multiple time limits (for example, a periodic limit and a lifetime limit) and applies the exemption policies differently to the time limits, the differences are footnoted. In almost all states, time limits apply only to months when adults receive what is considered TANF assistance, which includes all regular monthly cash aid and some other types of help. Some types of aid considered non-assistance are subsidized jobs programs and child care and transportation help for employed families. Months in which only non-assistance is received are always exempt from the TANF time limits. See section 260.31 of the final TANF rule for more information on assistance and non-assistance. The federal government requires that states disregard months during which an adult lived on a Native American reservation or in an Alaskan Native village with an adult unemployment rate of at least 50 percent. Furthermore, since time limits generally only apply to families that include adults (or minor heads of household), months in which an adult received assistance as a dependent child do not count. Many states exempt months in which a unit receives diversion payments. These policies are captured in table I.A.1. For information on whether months of receipt of transitional cash benefits (for families leaving TANF with employment) are counted or exempted, see the full database. This table focuses on the exemption rules in place as of July 2020. Rules may have differed for months of assistance received previously. Past policies are mentioned if they exempted a substantial part of the caseload for certain past time periods under TANF.

⁴ Months spent as primary care provider for one child, birth to 23 months old, are exempt. The exemption does not apply to pregnant and parenting teens under age 20 who do not have a high school diploma or equivalent. For two-parent families, each parent has the option to receive the exemption, but only one exemption can be granted at a time. An individual may only be eligible for this exemption one time.

⁷ While the state does not allow for an explicit exemption for caring for a child under a specific age, if there is inadequate access to child care, an exemption may be granted so the parent may stay home to care for the child.

⁸ The exemption does not apply to children subject to a family cap.

⁹ A woman who is pregnant may be granted an exemption if a physician certifies the woman's inability to work. A woman in postpartum is granted an exemption until the end of the month that includes the sixth week after the pregnancy has ended.

¹² Recipients are exempt from time limits.

¹³ A minor is exempt from the time limit if he or she has a child or if she is pregnant.

¹⁴ To be exempt, the individual must be unemployed, employed less than 20 hours a week, or attend school for no more than six credit hours per week, have had a relationship to the perpetrator of the violence, and have taken action as a result of the domestic violence (including, but not limited to, getting a court order protecting the individual from the perpetrator or living in a domestic violence shelter within the past 12 months).

¹⁶ This exemption applies to the benefit reduction limit.

- ¹⁷ This exemption applies to the lifetime limit.
- ¹⁸ A minor parent who lives in an adult-supervised setting and is not considered a head of household may be exempt.
- ¹⁹ This exemption applies to the periodic time limit.
- ²⁰ The assistance unit may receive an exemption to the periodic limit, but not the lifetime limit, for months in which the unit receives benefits in another state or the parent has earned income and is eligible to receive the $900 time-limited deduction.
- ²¹ The unit is placed in this component if (1) the recipient is caring for a child under age 2 who is in the unit or would be in the unit except that the child receives SSI, foster care maintenance payments, or adoption assistance, or (2) the recipient is caring for a child under 3 months old who is not included in the unit.
- ²² Units where the head is pregnant and the child is expected to be born within 120 days are placed in this component.
- ²³ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in an alternative component that is exempt from time limits.
- ²⁴ The assistance unit may receive an exemption to the periodic limit, but not the lifetime limit, for months in which either a sanction results in the ineligibility of the entire unit or the unit head does not have to participate in work activities. The exemption provided for months accrued during the COVID-19 pandemic applies to the periodic limit.
- ²⁵ To be exempt, minor parents must be living in a supervised setting and complying with a social service plan or, if they are 18 or 19 years old, they must be complying with education requirements.
- ²⁶ To receive the exemption, the family must be complying with activities in an approved safety plan.
- ²⁷ Individuals caring for a child under 12 weeks of age are placed in an alternative component that is exempt from time limits.
- ²⁸ A minor parent who meets the definition of a dependent child is exempt.
- ²⁹ The unit is placed in this component if caring for a child under 12 weeks of age.
- ³⁰ Pregnant women are placed in this component beginning the month before the month of their due date.
- ³¹ This exemption only applies to non-parent caretaker relatives.
- ³² Eligible recipients participating in the Education Works Program are exempted from the 60-month lifetime limit.
- ³³ This state continues to fund families beyond 60 months of benefit receipt using state funding. However, the state may exempt certain months in calculating the number of federally funded months of assistance.
- ³⁴ This exemption applies to the benefit waiting period.
- ³⁵ The assistance unit may receive an exemption for the benefit waiting period, but not the lifetime limit, for months in which the unit meets the following circumstances: benefits were received in another state; participating in drug, alcohol, or mental health treatment; not receiving support services; or not required to participate in work activities. Termination of cash assistance due to reaching the lifetime limit and benefit waiting period is temporarily suspended during the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ³⁶ If the minor parent is not the head of the assistance unit, the months do not count.
- ³⁷ Minor parents are defined for this purpose as heads of household up to 18 years old.
- ³⁸ The assistance unit may receive an exemption for the periodic limit, but not the lifetime limit, for months in which the unit meets the following circumstances: benefits were received in another state; not receiving support services; an adult family member is providing a home for and caring for a child whom the state has determined to be abandoned and for whom the alternative placement is foster care; or the benefit is less than $10.

- ³⁹ Months with this characteristic are exempt from work activities. When people are exempt from work activities (and do not volunteer to participate), those months are exempt from the benefit waiting period.
- ⁴⁰ Individuals who are unemployed because of high local unemployment may be exempt as long as they contact an average of 40 employers a month. This exemption applies only to the benefit waiting period. Individuals sanctioned for noncompliance may be exempt from the lifetime limit but not the benefit waiting period.
- ⁴¹ These exemptions apply to the lifetime limit.
- ⁴² The first 12 months of a possible 24-month young-child time limit exemption do not count towards the state time limit. The child may be any age under 24 months.
- ⁴³ Recipients in this component are exempt from the benefit waiting period but not the lifetime limit. The criteria for inclusion in this component may include some of the exemptions listed in this table. For exemptions that are not relevant to the criteria for inclusion in this component, n.a. is listed.
- ⁴⁴ Individuals caring for a child under 12 months of age are placed in this component and are therefore exempt from the benefit waiting period, but their months still count for the lifetime limit.
- ⁴⁵ Units with this characteristic are placed in this component and are therefore exempt from the benefit waiting period, but their months still count for the lifetime limit.
- ⁴⁶ Individuals 60 years of age or older are placed in this component and are therefore exempt from the benefit waiting period, but their months still count for the lifetime limit.
- ⁴⁷ Individuals caring for a child under 12 months of age are placed in the alternative component.
- ⁴⁸ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in an alternative component.
- ⁴⁹ Individuals 60 years of age or older are placed in an alternative component.
- ⁵⁰ This exemption applies to the benefit waiting period.
- ⁵¹ Individuals not receiving support services may be exempt from the benefit waiting period but not the lifetime limit.
- ⁵² Units may be enrolled in W-2T, CSJ, and/or TEMP for a combined total of 60 months. Units may participate in W-2T, CSJ, and/or TEMP for 24 cumulative months each. Months in UE do not count towards the 60-month limit.
- ⁵³ Recipients in the TEMP component are exempt from the federal lifetime limit.
- ⁵⁴ This exemption only applies to participants in the Custodial Parent of an Infant (CMC) placement. To be exempt from the federal lifetime limit, the recipient must not have participated in a Community Service Job (CSJ) or W-2 Transition (W-2 T) placement immediately preceding the CMC placement. To be exempt from the state lifetime limit, the recipient's child must have been born less than 10 months from the date the individual is first determined eligible for AFDC or a TEMP, CSJ, or W-2 T placement, eligibility determination occurred before October 1, 1996, or the birth was the result of incest or sexual assault. To be exempt from the 24-month placement time limit, the recipient's child must have been born less than 10 months from the date the individual is first determined eligible for AFDC or a TEMP, CSJ, or W-2 T placement, eligibility determination occurred before October 1, 1996, or the birth was the result of incest or sexual assault.
- ⁵⁵ This exemption applies to the federal lifetime limit. Recipients in the TEMP component are exempt from the federal lifetime limit.
- ⁵⁶ Recipients in this component do not have their months counted toward the federal, state, or placement lifetime limits.
- ⁵⁷ Up to one year of assistance will count against minor parents who received assistance before reaching their 18th birthday. All months beyond 12 will not count toward the lifetime limit.

¹ Extension policies apply to months in which the state provides additional benefits to families after they have reached their time limit. These policies are potential extensions and may not be granted to all that are eligible. In most states, caseworkers have discretion in applying the extensions. If a state has multiple time limits (for example, a periodic limit and a lifetime limit) and applies the extension policies differently to the time limits, the differences are footnoted. The federal government requires that states disregard months during which an adult lived on a Native American reservation or in an Alaskan Native village with an adult unemployment rate of at least 50 percent. Furthermore, since time limits generally only apply to families that include adults (or minor heads of household), months in which an adult received assistance as a dependent child do not count.

² See the Welfare Rules Database for more information on how states define illness, incapacity, and disability.

³ To receive an extension, the individual must cooperate with child support enforcement and comply with JOBS in each month past the 60th month. Failure to meet these criteria results in permanent loss of program eligibility regardless of family circumstances and recovery of all benefits received past month 60.

⁵ This extension applies to the lifetime limit.

⁶ This extension applies to the lifetime limit. This extension is limited to single-parent units where the caretaker provides care for a disabled child, parent, spouse, or domestic partner. The unit must receive respite care for less than 20 hours a week and the disabled person may not attend school or vocational rehabilitation more than 20 hours a week.

⁸ Extensions will not be granted if the caretaker adult received and rejected offers of employment, quit a job without good cause, was fired for cause, or did not comply with the contract. Units that reapply after their time limit may receive assistance if circumstances exist for an extension to be granted.

- ⁹ An extension may be available for caretakers who put forward their best effort but could not find a job due to a lack of suitable employment in the local economy; the maximum extension is 12 cumulative months.
- ¹⁰ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in the alternative component, which is exempt from time limits.
- ¹¹ Recipients in this component are exempt from time limits. The requirements for inclusion in this component may include some of the criteria listed in this table.
- ¹² Recipients are exempt from time limits.
- ¹³ The ill, incapacitated, or disabled person must be a related child under age 18 or a spouse. Months in which the family has a disabled child in the home approved for a waiver under the Home and Community-Based Care Program are exempt.
- ¹⁴ An individual may earn one month for every six months he or she works in an unsubsidized job. This extension applies to the benefit reduction limit.
- ¹⁵ This extension applies to the benefit reduction limit.
- ¹⁶ This extension applies to the periodic time limit.
- ¹⁷ The 30 hours a week applies to one-parent families. Two-parent families must participate in activities for 55 hours a week. For one-parent families, 25 of the 30 hours must be in employment; for two-parent families, 45 of the 55 hours must be in employment. Participants must be in compliance in the 60th month as well as for 10 of the last 12 months preceding the 61st month to be eligible for the extension.
- ¹⁸ The extension is available only to assistance groups whose cases were closed because of time limits and who are reapplying for assistance.
- ¹⁹ This extension cannot be used for cases that are reapplying for an extension after the case has been closed.
- ²⁰ Extensions may be granted to: (1) everyone if New Hampshire Employment Security has determined that the state is eligible for the federal/state cooperative extended benefit program, or if the state has an unemployment rate above seven percent; (2) to families living in areas designated by the US Department of Labor as surplus areas.
- ²¹ Recipients who are unable to work are moved into the alternative component, which is exempt from time limits. Recipients with a temporary incapacity remain in the time-limited component but may receive an extension.
- ²² New York continues to provide noncash assistance to all units that have reached the 60-month federal time limit.
- ²³ This extension applies to the benefit waiting period. Individuals who are substantially complying with their mutual responsibility agreement and are unable to obtain or maintain employment that provides a basic subsistence (defined as less than the state's maximum Work First payment minus 27.5 percent from each worker's income) may receive an extension up to a maximum of six months.
- ²⁴ This extension applies to the lifetime limit. Extensions may be granted if the only available employment does not meet basic requirements of health and safety as determined by the county board.
- ²⁵ This extension applies to minor parent heads of household and caretaker relatives.
- ²⁶ Two-parent families must work 55 hours a week to receive this extension. An individual may also receive this extension if he or she is working 20 hours a week and participating in approved work or training activities for at least 10 hours a week.
- ²⁷ To receive this extension, an individual must have completed the eight-week job search and, in the first 12 months of assistance, begun an approved employment and training program for 30 hours a week or a full-time postsecondary educational activity.
- ²⁸ To qualify for any extension, a caretaker must have fewer than 12 months of activities or child support sanctions since November 1, 1996.
- ²⁹ This extension applies to the lifetime limit. To be eligible for an extension, the recipient must have been unable to obtain sufficient employment during the last 12 consecutive months before the end of the 60-month limit and may not have had more than one sanction since November 1, 1996. The inability to obtain sufficient employment cannot be the result of voluntarily quitting a job.

³¹ This extension applies to the lifetime limit. An extension is granted if the following two conditions are met: (1) during the previous two months, the parent was employed for no less than 20 hours a week, (2) the parent is expected to be employed for no less than 20 hours a week in the month for which financial assistance is being authorized.

³⁴ In a two-parent household both parents must be totally physically or mentally disabled and unable to work 20 hours per week. Participants who have a temporary illness, incapacity, or disability are still subject to the lifetime limit.

³⁵ This extension applies to the benefit waiting period. If local unemployment is greater than 10 percent for the six months prior to the client's request for hardship exception, an extension may be granted.

³⁶ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in the alternative component.

³⁷ Households must participate full time (32 to 40 hours a week) in work-related activities, which may include a combination of working, job search, or preparing for work, in order to continue receiving assistance.

⁴⁰ This extension applies to the state lifetime limit and placement time limits.

⁴² This extension applies to the state lifetime limit and applies to the placement time limits for recipients in the W-2T component.

¹ Extension policies apply to months in which the state provides additional benefits to families after they have reached their time limit. These policies are potential extensions and may not be granted to all that are eligible. In most states, caseworkers have discretion in applying the extensions. If a state has multiple time limits (for example, a periodic limit and a lifetime limit) and applies the extension policies differently to the time limits, the differences are footnoted. The federal government requires that states disregard months during which an adult lived on a Native American reservation or in an Alaskan Native village with an adult unemployment rate of at least 50 percent. Furthermore, since time limits generally only apply to families that include adults (or minor heads of household), months in which an adult received assistance as a dependent child do not count.

² A six-month hardship extension was granted to participants due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

⁵ These extensions apply to the lifetime limit. When a household reaches either the 12-month state time limit or the 5-year federal time limit, the household may receive an additional 12 months of cash assistance when there is a work program mandatory participant who is in compliance with the Jobs program and the dependent children in the assistance unit maintain a 90 percent school attendance.

⁸ Extensions will not be granted if the caretaker adult received and rejected offers of employment, quit a job without good cause, was fired for cause, or did not comply with the contract. Units that reapply after their time limit may receive assistance if circumstances exist for an extension to be granted.

¹³ An individual who is participating in good standing in an approved education program such as vocational education training may be eligible for an extension of up to six months. Three subsequent incremental extensions of up to six months are available. Extensions beyond the lifetime limit will be granted due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Families that have already reached the time limit can reapply and be granted extensions if otherwise eligible.

²² Months in which the parent was exempt from activities requirements because he or she was caring for a young child are deducted from the 12-month extension period. For example, if the unit head was previously exempted from activities requirements for 3 months and then reaches the 60-month time limit, he or she may only receive an additional 9-month extension, provided one of his or her children is under 12 months old.

²³ Participants who were nearing their 24th or 48th month of benefits and participants who were already facing the 12-month waiting period were granted an extension due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

³² This extension applies to the periodic time limit. A pregnant woman, who has not been participating in the work program because she is in the seventh month of her pregnancy, may receive an extension. The woman must begin participating in the work program to receive the extension.

³³ The assistance unit may receive an extension to the periodic time limit for months the unit head is participating in a county approved training program that will not be completed by the 24th month. The assistance unit may receive an extension to the lifetime limit for months in which the unit head is in drug, alcohol, or mental health treatment or has an open case with Child Protective Services.

³⁹ A participant may request a modification or deferment of the work requirement on the basis of an unpaid leave of absence from employment (to which the participant is entitled under Vermont's Parental and Family Leave statute) and must provide verification that his or her employer has approved this leave of absence.

⁴³ This extension applies only to nonparent relative caretakers.

⁴⁸ Recipients in the TEMP component are exempt from the federal lifetime limit.

⁵⁰ This extension applies to the state lifetime limit.

⁵¹ Significant barriers include, but are not limited to, low achievement ability, learning disability, severe emotional problems, or family problems, which include legal problems, family crises, homelessness, domestic abuse, or children's school or medical activities that affect one of the members of the assistance unit. These extensions apply to the state lifetime limit.

⁴ Recipients are eligible for Work Support Payment (WSP) twice in their lifetime.

⁶ There is no minimum hour requirement, but recipients of transitional benefits must maintain employment.

¹¹ Single parents or two-parent households in which one parent is disabled, with children age six or older, must work 30 hours per week, or 20 hours if they have children under age six. Two-parent, nondisabled households must work 55 hours per week.

¹⁷ The supplement must equal the monthly net loss of cash income that would occur if the supplement were not paid to the household.

- ¹⁸ For families no longer eligible for TANF due to time limits, they may be eligible for state and locally-funded safety net assistance cash benefits for up to 24 months. After 24 months, payments are restricted to vendors. There is no time limit on payments restricted to vendors.
- ¹⁹ If there is a child under age six in the household, the average work requirement is 20 hours a week.
- ²⁰ The monthly benefit amount consists of special allowances for child care, job retention, health insurance reimbursement, health tracks reimbursement, and a high school diploma or GED bonus.
- ²¹ Transitional benefits are equal to the monthly benefit the unit received.
- ²² Transitional benefits are equal to $100 in the first month, $75 in the second month, and $50 in the third month.
- ²³ A recipient must meet the work participation rate requirement, which is based on his or her circumstances.
- ²⁴ Rhode Island's policies include a description of a Post-Closure Employment Incentive Bonus to be paid for up to 12 months, for individuals who stop receiving regular cash aid while employed, and who remain employed. However, the program has not been implemented.
- ²⁵ Single parent households must work 30 hours per week, two-parent households not receiving federally funded child care must work 35 hours per week, and two-parent households receiving federally funded child care must work 55 hours per week.
- ²⁶ Transitional benefits are equal to the maximum benefit allotment for all eligible household members.
- ²⁷ Transitional benefits are equal to the unit's full benefit for the first two months and one half the benefit for the third month.
- ²⁸ Transitional benefits are limited to three months in a 12-month period.
- ²⁹ When both parents in a two-parent case are each employed 30 hours per week with hourly wages of at least the current federal minimum wage, the payment is $100. If one parent leaves the two-parent household, the payment will be reduced to $50.
- ³⁰ Transitional benefits for the Consolidated Emergency Assistance Program work as an income deduction. The following expenses are deducted when determining the amount of transitional benefits: a $90 work expense, payments made by a member with earned income for care of a member child up to specified maximums, and expenses for members during the current month that include medical bills, emergency child care, dental care, employment expenses, and the disaster cash assistance program.
- ³¹ Transitional benefits are limited to one month in a 12-month period.
- ³² Participants must maintain the employment level to remain eligible for transitional cash assistance.
- ³³ The transitional benefit is equal to half of the previous month's benefit.

V. Policies across Time, 1996–2020

This chapter of the Databook includes longitudinal tables for selected areas of policy from 1996, 2004, 2012, and 2020 (as of July 1 of each year). For years not shown in these tables, and for prior-year data for policies not covered in this section, see the full online WRD data.

To help users more easily identify changes in policies across time, the changes from one year to the next have been bolded in all the longitudinal tables. Because the tables do not represent every year, the changes may have occurred in a year before the bolded year. Information on when specific changes occurred is available in the WRD.

The following discussion provides more information on the policies included in this section and the specific policies discussed in the tables.

Formal diversion: Table L1 indicates which states have a formal diversion program that diverts eligible applicants or recipients from ongoing TANF receipt by providing a one-time cash payment directly to the family or to a vendor for expenses incurred by the family. Other strategies that states may use to divert applicants from ongoing receipt of cash benefits (such as requiring an applicant to participate in job search or resource and referral services) are not identified as diversion programs in the table.

States did not have the option to divert units under AFDC. However, a few states experimented with diversion through waivers. Generally, diversion programs began as pilot projects in a few counties and, after TANF, were expanded statewide.⁶²

Two-parent eligibility: Table L2 describes states' deviation from the prior federal AFDC rules for two-parent, nondisabled units over time. The key AFDC policies were the 100-hour rule for applicants and recipients, a 6-out-of-13-quarter work history test, and a 30-day waiting period. "Standard AFDC" describes the states that impose the AFDC rules. "Modified" describes the states that no longer impose all the former AFDC requirements on units but still impose some additional requirements. The specific combination of modified rules is footnoted. States that no longer impose any special requirements on two-parent units are denoted by "none."

⁶² Years in which the state implemented a diversion program as a pilot project in only a few counties are footnoted.

Many states began modifying or removing special requirements for two-parent units under waivers. This process continued under TANF, which does not require states to impose any special requirements on two-parent units.

Initial eligibility at application: Table L3 calculates the amount of earned income a three-person unit can receive and still be technically eligible for assistance. Technically eligible means the unit is eligible for assistance but may not actually receive a cash benefit. Most states will not pay out a benefit for less than a specified amount (usually $10), but as long as the unit's potential benefit is positive, the unit is technically eligible. The calculations in this table are based on the states' income eligibility tests, earned income disregards, benefit computation, and eligibility and payment standards.

Earned income disregards for benefit computation: Table L4 describes the earned income disregards allowed in determining net income used for benefit computation. The disregards in this table apply to recipients.⁶³ Earned income disregards for benefit computation under AFDC were a standard $120 and 33.3 percent for the first four months, $120 for the next eight months, and $90 thereafter. Through waivers, many states began changing their disregard policies, which often allowed units to keep more of their income and remain eligible for aid. This broadening of disregards continued under TANF, which allows states to determine their own disregard policies.

Maximum monthly benefit for a family of three with no income: Table L5 indicates the benefit that a family of three will receive if it has no income. The benefits are calculated assuming the assistance unit includes one parent and two children, contains no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for all shelter costs with no subsidies, and is subject to the benefit standard that applies to the majority of the state's caseload.

Maximum benefits have always varied across states. Benefit computation formulas and payment standards were two policies that states were able to determine under AFDC. The wide variation in states' benefits still exists under TANF. In many states, benefits have changed relatively infrequently across time.

Work-related exemption when caring for a child under X months: Table L6 indicates what age a child must be under for the unit head to be exempt from work-related requirements. The unit head is assumed to be a single parent age 20 or older with a high school diploma or GED.

Under AFDC, parents were exempt from the Job Opportunities and Basic Skills Training (JOBS) program if they had children younger than 36 months old.⁶⁴ Under waivers, many states began reducing the age of the child exemption. Then, with the passage of TANF, the federal government reduced the maximum age for the exemption to 12 months for the states' participation rate calculations. States can exempt units with children younger or older than 12 months, but units with children over 12 months old will be included in their work participation rate denominator. States with waivers were allowed to continue their previous exemption policy under TANF until the waivers expired.

Most severe sanction policy for noncompliance with work requirements for single-parent adults: Table L7 describes the most severe sanction policy for noncompliance with work requirements. Under AFDC, the worst-case sanction for not complying with work requirements was the removal of the adult for benefit computation purposes. The unit was sanctioned for six months or until compliance. By 1996, a few states had begun to impose more severe sanctions on noncompliant units. These policies continued and expanded under TANF. The federal government requires that all states sanction individuals for not complying with work requirements, but states are allowed to determine the severity of the sanction.

Asset tests: Tables L8 and L9 describe the asset limits and vehicle exemptions for recipients, respectively. If the tests differ for applicants, they are footnoted. Since the beginning of TANF, states' asset limits (and the decision whether to impose limits) have generally trended toward fewer restrictions or higher asset thresholds. Under AFDC rules, the federal government set the maximum amount of assets a unit could retain and still remain eligible at $1,000 of countable assets, with an exclusion of $1,500 of the equity value of a vehicle. During the early 1990s, states began experimenting with higher asset limits and vehicle exemptions through waivers. Under TANF, states determine the maximum allowable level of assets.

Family caps: Table L10 indicates which states have implemented family cap policies. States did not have the option to cap additional children under AFDC. However, a few states experimented with family caps through waivers.⁶⁵ TANF neither requires nor prohibits family cap policies.

² Alaska's TANF program is not currently implementing the diversion payment option due to systematic and program integrity reasons. Alaska may re-implement the payment option when its new eligibility software is fully launched and state statutes/regulations have been updated to better define diversion-eligible households. According to the legislation authorizing the program, a recipient can receive a cash payment worth up to three months of TANF benefits. If a family applies for assistance during the three-month ineligibility period, the entire amount of the diversion payment is treated as unearned income to the family. The diversion payment is prorated equally over the three months, and the prorated amount is counted as monthly income. An individual can receive diversion payments up to four times in a lifetime but no more than once every 12 months.

³ To be eligible, applicants must be employed full time, have an offer of full-time employment, or be likely to gain full-time employment based on education, skills, and work history. Applicants must also have a short-term verified financial need that is a barrier to achieving self-sufficiency, such as needing car repairs, child care, work clothes, overdue housing expenses, or transportation assistance.

⁴ To be eligible, applicants must have been employed or self-employed in the application month or within the 12 months prior to the application month; have successfully completed an educational, vocational, or job training program in the application month or within the six months prior to the application month; or have a job offer for full-time employment that will begin within three calendar months of the grant diversion period.

⁶ Counties have the option to vary their diversion programs. These policies refer to Denver County. The individual must demonstrate a need for a specific item or type of assistance, such as cash, supportive services, housing, or transportation and be employed within 30 days.

⁹ Florida has three separate diversion programs: (1) up-front diversion for individuals in need of assistance because of unexpected circumstances or emergency situations; (2) relocation assistance for individuals who reside in an area with limited employment opportunities and experience one of the following: geographic isolation, formidable transportation barriers, isolation from extended family, or domestic violence that threatens the ability of a parent to maintain self-sufficiency; and (3) cash severance for TANF recipients who are employed and receiving earnings, able to verify their earnings, will remain employed for at least six months, have received cash assistance for at least six consecutive months since October 1996, and are eligible for at least one more month of TANF.

¹¹ To be eligible for diversion assistance, a household must include at least one work-eligible individual as defined by the state, include one adult who has a work history of at least six months in the 36 months before the month of request for diversion assistance, and be eligible for cash assistance in the month the diversion assistance was issued.

¹² Illinois operates its diversion program through local community partners.

¹⁵ Minnesota's four-month Diversionary Work Program (DWP) is mandatory for all TANF applicants, unless exempt. Recipients receive financial assistance and must participate in four months of intensive employment services focused on helping the participant obtain an unsubsidized job before entering regular TANF. Failure to comply with the employment services, which may include a structured job search, results in ineligibility for both DWP and TANF until compliance. After completing the four-month program, participants who still require assistance may apply for TANF as applicants.

¹⁶ New Jersey's diversion program, the Early Employment Initiative (EEI), is mandatory for applicants who have a work history that equals or exceeds four months of full-time employment in the past 12 months, appear to meet TANF eligibility requirements, are not in immediate need, and do not meet criteria for a deferral from work requirements. Participants receive a one-time, lump-sum payment and are required to pursue an intensive job search for 15 to 30 days while their application is processed. If participants obtain employment and withdraw their application, they are eligible to receive a second lump-sum payment to assist in the transition to employment. If no employment is secured, the applicant is referred back to the Work First New Jersey (WFNJ)/TANF agency for cash assistance.

¹⁸ The diversion payment is intended to assist the benefit group with accepting or retaining employment, remedying an emergency situation, or alleviating an unexpected short-term need.

¹⁹ New York has three types of diversion payments: diversion payments (for crisis needs such as moving expenses, storage fees, or household structural or equipment repairs), diversion transportation payments (for employment-related transportation expenses), and diversion rental payments (for rental housing).

²¹ To be eligible, the applicant must have an identifiable one-time financial need, have been a resident of Tennessee for six months, have no identifiable barriers to employment, have earned a high school diploma or GED, and either be currently employed or have been steadily employed in six of the last 12 months, with at least three being consecutive. In two-parent units, both parents must meet the eligibility criteria to qualify for a diversion payment.

²⁴ To be eligible for diversion assistance, an applicant family must meet cash assistance financial eligibility and diversion eligibility criteria and, if it has no members who are mandatory applicants, must choose to participate in the diversion program. Families who meet the following criteria are mandatory applicants: (1) at least one member of the family is work eligible, (2) work-eligible individuals in the family are neither disregarded from nor meeting their cash assistance work requirement, (3) none of the work-eligible individuals have received a diversion assistance payment in the 12 months before the application month, (4) at least one work-eligible adult in a family who is not the primary caretaker of the children when both parents are able to work, and (5) at least one work-eligible adult in a family who has no barriers to obtain or maintain a job, and either has recent and stable employment with earnings of at least 150 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines, or has a marketable college degree or vocational education certificate.

²⁵ The diversion payment is considered a loan to assist with expenses related to obtaining or maintaining employment, and it must be repaid. Repayments are expected within 12 months but may be extended to 24 months. The loan may be paid back in cash or through a combination of cash and volunteer community service (valued at the higher of the state or federal minimum wage).

⁵ Modified rules for two-parent units: applicants must be connected to the workforce, which includes one of the following: (1) currently working at least 20 hours a week; (2) receiving unemployment compensation; (3) unemployed or working less than 20 hours a week and have earned at least $500 within the six months before application; (4) receiving retirement benefits; or (5) received disability benefits based on 100 percent disability in any of the last six months. Recipients do not face a work limit.

⁶ Modified rules for two-parent units: 30-day waiting period. The determination of primary earner was also eliminated, meaning although there is no limit to the number of hours either parent can work, they are still subject to unemployment classifications depending upon the number of hours they work. If one parent is working more than 100 hours then the family may not receive assistance for 30 days. If both parents are working less than 100 hours then the assistance begins 30 days from the date either one of the parents worked more than 100 hours. This applies to both applicants and recipients.

¹⁴ Modified rules for two-parent units: 100-hour work limit for applicants and recipients, and applicants must have a combined (both parents) gross income over the past six months equal to at least $1,500. Parents must not have terminated employment, reduced hours worked, or refused a job offer within the previous six months without good cause. In addition, the parents must have applied for unemployment benefits.

³ This threshold applies to units that have received assistance for no more than two months in a lifetime. For units applying for their third and subsequent months of benefits, the eligibility threshold for a family of three is $1,363.

⁴ This threshold applies to units that have received assistance for no more than two months in a lifetime. For units applying for their third and subsequent months of benefits, the eligibility threshold for a family of three is $1,441.

³ Individuals who have received the $120 disregard and the 33.3 percent disregard for the maximum numbers of months cannot qualify to receive those disregards again until they have not received basic cash assistance for 12 consecutive months.

⁵ If benefits or employment end before the fourth consecutive month of earnings, the recipient is eligible to receive the $30 and 33.3 percent disregard for four additional months upon reapplication or re-employment. When a recipient has received the $30 and 33.3 percent disregard for four consecutive months and the $30 disregard for an additional eight months, neither disregard may be applied again until the individual has not received any benefits for 12 months.

⁶ The unit may disregard $160 per employed member.

⁸ Recipients are eligible for the one-time, two-month 100 percent disregard if they become newly employed or report increased wages acquired after approval. Recipients are eligible to receive the 33.3 percent disregard during the first four consecutive months of earnings if they have not received benefits for at least 12 consecutive months.

¹⁰ Applicants with earned income who have passed the net income test and recipients who report a change in earned income are eligible for a 100 percent disregard for three months followed by a 75 percent disregard for three months.

¹¹ A client can have 100 percent of earned income disregarded for up to six consecutive months, or 12 consecutive benefit payments, immediately following the start of employment as long as the total household countable income does not exceed 200 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines for the unit size. The recipient may be eligible to disregard 100 percent of earned income more than 6 months if the case is closed for at least 30 days and the recipient has a different employer. Following the six-month period, a recipient will be eligible for the $200 disregard plus 50% of the remainder.

¹² Recipients are eligible for a one-time 100 percent disregard for the first six consecutive months of earnings if they find employment of 35 hours a week within the first 30 days of their initial approval for TANF. If work is not found within 30 days, the recipient is ineligible to ever receive the disregard again. An additional 100 percent disregard is available to units for three months when the unit's case is subject to closure because of increased earnings and the individual is employed for at least 25 hours a week at the federal minimum wage or higher. The recipient may not have already received the six-month disregard, unless there has been at least a 12-month break in receipt of TANF benefits. The three-month disregard may be received more than once during the 60-month TANF benefit period provided there is a period of at least 12 consecutive months in which a family does not receive TANF benefits before the family reapplies for assistance. Two-parent units are also eligible to receive the six-month and three-month disregards. Once a two-parent unit is ineligible for the six-month disregard, they may disregard $120 and 33.3 percent of the remainder for 12 consecutive months and $90 thereafter.

¹³ Recipients are eligible for a one-time 100 percent disregard for the first six consecutive months of earnings if they find employment of 35 hours a week within the first 30 days of their initial approval for TANF. If work is not found within 30 days, the recipient is ineligible to ever receive the disregard again. An additional 100 percent disregard is available to units for three months when the unit's case is subject to closure because of increased earnings and the individual is employed for at least 25 hours a week at the federal minimum wage or higher. The recipient may not have already received the six-month disregard, unless there has been at least a 12-month break in receipt of TANF benefits. The three-month disregard may be received more than once during the 60-month TANF benefit period provided there is a period of at least 12 consecutive months in which a family does not receive TANF benefits before the family reapplies for assistance.

¹⁶ These disregards apply to individuals working 20 or more hours a week. Individuals employed fewer than 20 hours a week may disregard 100 percent in the first month of employment and 50 percent thereafter; however, if an individual's hours increase to 20 hours during the first six months, he or she may disregard 75 percent for the remainder of the six-month period. The 100 percent disregard is applicable only once every 12 months, even if employment is lost and then regained.

¹⁷ Two-parent units may disregard all earnings in excess of 35 hours a week for one parent and 24 hours a week for the other parent, $225, and 50 percent of the remainder in the first 24 consecutive months of benefit receipt. Thereafter, they may disregard $225 and 50 percent of the remainder.

- ¹⁸ Two-parent units may disregard $225 and 50 percent of the remainder in all months.
- ¹⁹ The 54 percent disregard applies to recipient units and units that have received cash assistance in one of the four months prior to application.
- ²⁰ The 100 percent disregard is available only once in a lifetime and may be received only if the recipient is newly employed at a job that is expected to be permanent for more than 20 hours a week.
- ²¹ Each recipient has a lifetime limit of one 13-month cycle of the extra disregards, unless the recipient is employed for less than four consecutive months, in which case the 13-month cycle starts over upon re-employment.
- ²² Each recipient has a lifetime limit of one 13-month cycle of the extra disregards, unless the recipient is employed for less than six consecutive months, in which case the 13-month cycle starts over upon re-employment.
- ²³ The unit is not eligible to receive the disregard again until the unit has been off of AFDC for at least 12 consecutive months.
- ²⁴ These disregards apply to individuals working full time, defined as 20 hours a week for recipients caring for a child under age 6 and 30 hours a week for all other recipients. Individuals working less than full time may disregard $120 and 50 percent of the remainder.
- ²⁵ These disregards apply to individuals working full time, defined as 20 hours a week for recipients caring for a child under age 6 and 30 hours a week for all other recipients. Individuals working less than full time may disregard 100 percent of earnings for 3 consecutive months each 12-month period and $120 and 50 percent of the remainder thereafter. Regardless of the number of hours worked, the 100 percent disregard only applies to recipients who reside in units where all members have a combined monthly income less than or equal to $2,064 and do not remain eligible for cash assistance after all other disregards are applied to the payment standard.
- ²⁶ The 50 percent disregard is available only once in a lifetime.
- ²⁷ Once the recipient has received four months (they need not be consecutive) of the 90 percent disregard, he or she is not eligible to receive the disregard again until the TANF case has been denied and remains denied for one full month, and 12 calendar months have passed since the denial. The 12-month ineligibility period begins with the first full month of denial after the client used the fourth month of the 90 percent disregard.
- ²⁸ These disregards apply to recipients with income from unsubsidized employment or a combination of subsidized and unsubsidized employment. For recipients with earnings from subsidized employment only, the disregard is $90.
- ²⁹ The flat portion of the disregard is $134 for units with one to four members, $149 for units with five members, and $171 for units with six or more members.
- ³⁰ The flat portion of the disregard is $147 for units with one to three members, $155 for units with four members, $181 for units with five members, and $208 for units with six or more members. A recipient who is participating in unsubsidized employment is eligible for an enhanced earned income disregard, provided the TANF recipient's income does not exceed 100 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines or 150 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines for TANF-UP households.
- ³¹ The flat portion of the disregard is $167 for units with one to three members, $178 for units with four members, $209 for units with five members, and $240 for units with six or more members. A recipient who is participating in unsubsidized employment is eligible for an enhanced earned income disregard, provided the TANF recipient's income does not exceed 100 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines or 150 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines for TANF-UP households.
- ³² Married couples with a child in common may disregard $400.
- ³³ Married couples with a child in common may disregard $1,200.

² Bolded text indicates a change from the previous year shown. Maximum benefits are calculated assuming that the unit contains one adult and two children who are not subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for shelter, and lives in the most populated area of the state. Only earned income disregards are described in the table. Child care disregards and other special disregards, such as deductions for units subject to a time limit or a family cap, are not included. The figures include the impact of earned income disregards for recipients. If the disregards differ for applicants, it is footnoted. Data shown in the table for the year 1996 reflect states' AFDC policies; data shown in the table for all subsequent years reflect states' TANF policies. If a state's program includes mutually-exclusive components in some years but not others, then in the years without components, the state's information is shown on the statewide row and the component rows show "n.a.", and in the years with components, the state's information is shown on the component rows and the statewide row shows "n.a."

⁸ This amount applies to units paying $400 per month for housing. Benefits are lower if housing expenses are lower. For units with higher expenses, the benefit may be higher by up to $90 times the ratio of the payment standard to need standard.

⁹ The TEMP component was not in place in this year.

³ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. While the caretaker is exempt from work activities requirements, the recipient will still be required to develop a Family Self-Sufficiency Plan outlining the self-sufficiency activities in which he or she will participate.

⁴ Participants are exempt from activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

⁸ Persons caring for one child 12 to 23 months old or two or more children under six years old are exempt from work requirements. An individual may only be eligible for this exemption one time. An exemption for care of an additional child six months of age or under is also available.

- ⁹ Months spent as a primary care provider for one child, birth to 23 months old, are exempt. For two-parent families, each parent has the option to receive the exemption but only one exemption can be granted at a time. An individual may only be eligible for this exemption one time. An exemption for care of an additional child six months of age or under is also available. Participants are granted good cause if they are unable to meet activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ¹⁰ A recipient caring for a child under the age of six who is unable to obtain child care may be exempt from work activities or sanctions. Counties have the option to vary some activities exemptions. These policies refer to Denver County.
- ¹¹ The exemption applies only if the child is not subject to a family cap.
- ¹² The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime.
- ¹³ Recipients in this component are automatically exempt from activities requirements.
- ¹⁴ Recipients in this component are automatically exempt from employment-related activities requirements. If recipients participate in the Transitional Work Program (TWP), they must develop an individualized transitional work plan with their case manager and comply with the activities requirements and deadlines established in the plan.
- ¹⁵ Recipients may be required to attend classes or other activities.
- ¹⁶ The exemption is limited to once in the recipient's lifetime.
- ¹⁷ Single custodial parents can have one three-month exemption per child up to a cumulative total of 12 months.
- ¹⁸ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. Applicants are temporarily exempt from activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ¹⁹ This exemption does not apply to units in which the youngest related child is age 13 or older.
- ²⁰ Recipients may be required to attend classes or other activities. Participants are exempt from activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ²¹ Although recipients are not exempt, they may be absent from work without sanction if they have a newborn child. Absence from activities is determined using the standards of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993. The maximum time available for one parent is 12 work weeks during any 12-month period, and for two parents, the maximum is the aggregate of 12 work weeks of leave for both parents.
- ²² Although recipients are not exempt, they may be absent from work without sanction if they have a newborn child. Absence from activities is determined using the standards of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993. The maximum time available for one parent is 12 work weeks during any 12-month period.
- ²³ The exemption cannot be claimed by any adult in the unit when at least one adult has reached the 48th month of cash assistance.
- ²⁴ This is a one-time exemption for the first child only. A recipient caring for a child under the age of six who is unable to obtain child care may be exempt from work activities or sanctions.
- ²⁵ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. A recipient caring for a child under the age of six who is unable to obtain child care may be exempt from work activities or sanctions.
- ²⁶ Individuals caring for a child under two years old are placed in an alternative component.
- ²⁷ Women are exempt from activities requirements for three months after giving birth when the newborn is in the home or for postpartum recovery when the newborn is not in the home.
- ²⁸ Women are exempt from activities requirements for two months after giving birth when the newborn is in the home or for postpartum recovery when the newborn is not in the home.
- ²⁹ The exemption is limited to once in the recipient's lifetime and applies only if the child is not subject to a family cap. The exemption applies only if the assistance unit has not already used all 12 months of the previous Employment Services exemption allowed for a child under 12 months of age (effective before July 1, 2004).
- ³⁰ Participants are temporarily exempt from activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ³¹ Individuals caring for a newborn child may count this activity toward participation requirements for two full months following the child's birth month, up to a total of 12 months in an individual's lifetime. Individuals can choose not to participate in other work activities during this time.
- ³² Individuals caring for a newborn child may count this activity toward participation requirements for three full months following the child's birth month, up to a total of 12 months in an individual's lifetime. Individuals can choose not to participate in other work activities during this time.

- ³³ Recipients caring for children under three months old are placed in an alternative component.
- ³⁴ Although recipients caring for children between three and six months old are in the non-time-limited assistance component, they are expected to participate in limited work activities. Recipients caring for a child under three months old are exempt.
- ³⁵ Recipients caring for a child under three months old are exempt and are non-time-limited for the period of time they qualify for this exemption. This exemption can be extended under special circumstances.
- ³⁶ Parents can have one three-month exemption per child up to a cumulative total of 12 months.
- ³⁷ Recipients who have received 39 or more months of assistance cannot receive this exemption, unless the youngest child in the assistance group is under 12 weeks of age.
- ³⁸ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. If the recipient has exhausted this 12-month limit or has received 39 or more months of assistance prior to the birth of an additional child, the unit must participate in NHEP when the youngest child turns 12 weeks old.
- ³⁹ The exemption may last for no more than 12 months in a recipient's lifetime, and it may not last for more than three months for any one child unless the social services official makes a determination to extend the exemption for up to the total 12 months.
- ⁴⁰ The exemption does not apply to parents who are working more than 30 hours a week. These parents are automatically enrolled into the Work First component and are subject to activities requirements.
- ⁴¹ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. Participants are granted good cause if they are unable to meet activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ⁴² A parent personally providing care for his or her child under age one is expected to participate in the work program but cannot be sanctioned for failure to do so.
- ⁴³ One parent in a two-parent household is exempt until the infant is 16 weeks old.
- ⁴⁴ Participants are granted good cause if they are unable to meet activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ⁴⁵ If parents are unable to find care for a child under age 13, the state may exempt the parents from activity requirements while it provides assistance in finding child care. Two-parent households that have applied for benefits due to the COVID-19 pandemic and are unable to work due to the pandemic are able to be determined incapacitated and are exempt from activity requirements.
- ⁴⁶ The parent is exempt from working but must participate in the Reach Up program.
- ⁴⁷ The exemption is limited to 24 months in a recipient's lifetime. In addition, recipients may be exempt for 13 weeks following the birth of each additional child.
- ⁴⁸ Recipients caring for a child subject to a family cap are only exempt while the child is under six weeks old. Individuals with this characteristic are placed in the All, except VIEW component. All individuals in this component are exempt from activities requirements.
- ⁴⁹ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. The caretaker can be exempt for a maximum of six additional weeks if he or she has another child after the limit expires. Recipients caring for a child subject to a family cap are only exempt while the child is under six weeks old. Individuals with this characteristic are placed in the All, except VIEW component. All individuals in this component are exempt from activities requirements.
- ⁵⁰ Individuals with this characteristic are placed in an alternative component.
- ⁵¹ The exemption is limited to 12 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. Participants may be required to participate in mental health or chemical dependency treatment if it is indicated in their assessment.
- ⁵² The exemption is limited to 24 cumulative months in the recipient's lifetime. Participants may be required to participate in mental health or chemical dependency treatment if it is indicated in their assessment. Participants are exempt from activities requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ⁵³ The exemption applies only to the birth of a first child. The recipient is exempt for only six months after the birth of any additional child (the six months include any time the recipient chooses to be exempt during pregnancy).
- ⁵⁴ The state does not consider these groups technically exempt; however, they may meet the state's criteria for good cause for noncompliance or deferral. This may be taken any time while the child is under 12 months for up to 12 months in the recipient's lifetime. In addition, all mothers are eligible for a 12-week postpartum exemption good cause period following the birth of any additional child.

³ For the seventh and subsequent months of noncompliance, the caseworker has discretion to either reduce the unit's benefits by 50 percent or close the case. If the case is closed, the unit may reapply for its full benefits, but the application will be pending until the unit complies with requirements for two weeks.

⁴ For recipients who have not reached the time limit, the entire assistance unit loses benefit eligibility for three months and must reapply for assistance after the sanction period. For recipients who have had their time limit extended, the entire assistance unit loses benefit eligibility for the remainder of the extension and does not qualify for additional extensions.

- ⁷ Assistance may still be provided to children under age 16 in the unit; these benefits are issued to a protective payee (after the second and subsequent sanction).
- ⁸ Assistance may still be provided to children under age 16 in the unit; these benefits are issued to a protective payee (after the second and subsequent sanction). Activities requirements are suspended due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ⁹ Activities requirements are suspended due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ¹⁰ Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, recipients with existing sanctions have the opportunity to cure their sanction by contacting the department and agreeing to cooperate.
- ¹¹ The sanctioned parent must sign a new Family Investment Agreement and complete 20 hours of eligible education or work activities to become eligible again.
- ¹² To determine compliance, the unit must sign a Family Contract Amendment.
- ¹³ Sanctions due to failure to comply with activities requirements are temporarily suspended due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ¹⁴ To determine compliance, the unit must sign a family contract amendment. Sanctions due to failure to comply with activities requirements are temporarily suspended due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ¹⁵ Recipients in this component are not required to participate in work activities; therefore, they are not subject to sanctions.
- ¹⁶ An individual who demonstrates good cause will not be sanctioned for noncompliance with work requirements.
- ¹⁷ Activities requirements and sanctions due to failure to comply with activities requirements are temporarily suspended due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ¹⁸ The participant loses eligibility for the PAS program and the household loses benefits for up to six months.
- ¹⁹ The benefit amount is reduced by 67 percent and the unit must participate in an assessment of the family's barriers. If it is determined that they have barriers, their employment plan is revised. If it is determined that they do not have barriers, the case is closed.
- ²⁰ If a unit accrues three months of sanctions in any 12-month period, the case may be closed. Any portion of a month counts as one full month.
- ²¹ This sanction applies to noncompliance that continues for three or more months. If the adult is noncompliant for less than three months, the pro rata share is removed, but the case remains open.
- ²² If the participant is not complying with child support enforcement, school attendance, or reporting requirements in the New Mexico Works Program, the individual's Education Work Program case is closed and the individual is transitioned back to the New Mexico Works Program. If noncompliance stems from not meeting the educational institution's standards or having a GPA for the semester below 2.5, the program participant is placed on probation. If standards have not been met or an overall GPA of 2.5 has not been achieved by the end of the probationary period, the department may take action to terminate an individual's participation in the Education Works Program and transition the individual back to the New Mexico Works Program.
- ²³ The state suspended mandatory in-person activity requirements due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
- ²⁴ This policy applies to individuals who do not reside in a city with a population of one million or more individuals. For individuals who reside in a city of one million or more, the length of the sanction is until compliance with employment requirements, as assigned by the local district. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, participants cannot be sanctioned for failure to comply with activities requirements that require in-person contact.
- ²⁵ This sanction applies to noncompliance that continues for three or more months. If the adult is noncompliant for less than three months, the entire benefit is removed, but the case remains open.
- ²⁶ Sanctions due to failure to participate in activities requirements are temporarily suspended due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Applicants and recipients with active sanctions can receive benefits if otherwise eligible.

²⁷ If the adult is noncompliant for one month or less, only the adult portion of the benefit is removed. If noncompliance continues after one month of reduced benefits, the case is closed. Activities requirements are suspended due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

²⁹ A family may be eligible for TANF after less than two months if the sanction is applied in error, the individual that was sanctioned is JOBS exempt, the sanctioned individual leaves the household, or there was good cause for non-compliance. For three months after a TANF case is closed due to sanction, an individual must be in compliance for two consecutive weeks in order for the sanction to end.

³¹ If the individual is noncompliant for one to six months, 110 percent of the parent's benefits is reduced from the unit's benefit. For 7 to 12 months of noncompliance, 120 percent of the parent's benefits is reduced from the unit's benefit. For months 13–18, there is a 130 percent reduction. For months 19–24, there is a 140 percent reduction. Following 24 months of noncompliance, the reduction is decreased to 100 percent of the parent's benefit, but the entire remaining benefit must be made to a protective payee. The individual is sanctioned until he or she is in compliance for two weeks.

³² If a person is penalized and then becomes exempt, the benefits will be restored in the first full month following the month in which the state received documentation of the exemption.

³⁴ The unit must also complete a two-week trial participation period before it is eligible to receive benefits again.

³⁵ Sanctions due to failure to comply with activities requirements are temporarily suspended due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Families with active sanctions prior to the state of emergency will have their sanctions lifted and can receive benefits.

³⁶ Wisconsin has multiple components. If a recipient refuses to participate in an activity, he or she is permanently ineligible for benefits in that component. The unit may receive benefits again if it becomes eligible for one of the other components. There is no permanent sanction for individuals in unsubsidized employment.

³ The asset limit for applicants is $1,000.

⁵ Units including an elderly or disabled person may exempt $15,000; all other units exempt $10,000.

⁷ Units including an elderly or disabled person may exempt $3,500; all other units exempt $2,250.

⁹ The asset limit for applicants is $2,000.

¹⁰ The asset limit for applicants is $2,000 unless at least one member of the household was a program recipient in the month before the month of application, in which case the asset limit is $5,000.

¹⁹ The limit is reduced to $2,500 if the recipient does not cooperate with his or her case plan. JOBS Plus and JOBS participants must first be deemed eligible under normal rules. The asset limit for applicants is $2,500.

²⁰ The limit is reduced to $2,500 if the recipient does not cooperate with his or her case plan. JOBS Plus and JOBS participants must first be deemed eligible under normal rules. The asset limit for applicants is $2,500. During the COVID-19 pandemic, the asset limit is $10,000 for new applicants and all recipients.

² Vehicles are exempt if used for one of the following: (1) to meet the family's basic needs, such as getting food and medical care or other essentials; (2) to go to and from work, school, training, or work activity (such as job search or community service); (3) as the family's house; (4) to produce self-employment income; or (5) to transport a disabled family member, whether or not he or she is a part of the assistance unit. If the vehicle does not meet one of these requirements, the equity value of the vehicle is counted in the determination of resources.

¹⁰ A single-parent unit may exempt $4,650 of the vehicle's equity value if it is used for job search or to travel to work or education and training. Otherwise, $1,500 of the equity value may be excluded. A two-parent unit may exempt $4,650 of the equity value of two vehicles. The vehicle is completely excluded if it is used more than 50 percent of the time to produce income or as a dwelling.

¹² When there is more than one vehicle, the vehicle with the greater equity value is exempt. If a vehicle has special equipment for the disabled, the added value of the special equipment is exempt and does not increase the vehicle's value.

¹⁶ Campers and trailers are also exempt.

¹⁸ The state compares the value of the vehicle to two standards: $10,000 of the fair-market value and $5,000 of the equity value. If the value of the vehicle exceeds either limit, the excess counts toward the asset limit; if the value of the vehicle exceeds both limits, only the excess of the greater amount counts toward the asset limit.

²⁰ The value of any additional vehicle necessary for employment is also exempt.

²¹ Applicants may exempt $10,000 of the vehicle value.

- ²² Recreational vehicles are not exempt. If a vehicle is non-exempt, its equity value counts toward the asset limit. Additionally, industrial vehicles—heavy haulers, pulpwood trucks, etc.—are exempt as long as they are used for income-producing purposes over 50 percent of the time, or as long as they annually produce income consistent with their fair-market value. Determination of whether to count non-recreational vehicles is made on a case-by-case basis.
- ²³ All vehicles primarily used to produce income or as a home are also exempt.
- ²⁴ The entire vehicle is exempt only if used for employment, training, medical transportation, or as a home. If a unit has more than one vehicle that meets the exemption criteria, only the vehicle with the greatest equity value will be exempt.
- ²⁵ The equity value of any additional non-exempt, non-junk vehicles counts toward the asset limit.
- ²⁶ Units with two adults or one adult and a minor child at least 17 years old may exempt up to $4,650 of the fair-market value of a second vehicle if it is essential for work, training, or transporting a disabled individual.
- ²⁷ Recreational vehicles are not exempt and are evaluated for fair market value.
- ²⁸ The vehicle is only exempt if it is equipped for those with physical impairments or used for transportation to work, work activities, or daily living requirements. If the vehicle is not used for these purposes, the entire equity value of the vehicle is subject to the asset test.
- ²⁹ The asset limit was removed due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Under New Mexico’s standard asset limits policy, the vehicle is only exempt if it is equipped for those with physical impairments or used for transportation to work, work activities, or daily living requirements. If the vehicle is not used for these purposes, the entire equity value of the vehicle is subject to the asset test.
- ³⁰ If the vehicle is needed to seek or retain employment, $9,300 of the vehicle's fair-market value is exempt (or a higher amount determined by the local district). Otherwise, up to $4,650 may be exempt.
- ³¹ Local districts may adopt a higher vehicle exemption. When the fair market value of the first vehicle exceeds the specified maximum exemption, the equity value must be determined and then applied against the resource limit.
- ³² Boats are included in the definition of motor vehicles. The exclusion does not apply to mobile homes other than the primary physical residence.
- ³³ One vehicle with an equity value less than $40,000 is exempt per household. Vehicles with the equity value of at least $40,000 and any additional non-exempt vehicles count toward the asset limit.
- ³⁴ Exemptions for adult drivers cannot exceed two vehicles per household. However, the household may also exempt the entire value of a vehicle that is used primarily to transport a disabled family member, to produce income, or as the family’s home.
- ³⁵ Vehicles owned by or used to transport disabled individuals, vehicles essential to self-employment, income-producing vehicles, and vehicles used as a home are also exempt. The equity value of any additional non-exempt vehicles counts toward the asset limit.
- ³⁶ In addition to one primary vehicle, an assistance unit may totally exclude a vehicle used to transport water or fuel to the home when it is not piped in, a vehicle used to transport a disabled member or SSI recipient in the household, or a vehicle used in producing income or as a home. An assistance unit may also exclude $4,650 of the fair-market value of a vehicle used to transport members of the unit, obtain or continue employment, or attend school or training.
- ³⁷ All licensed vehicles used for income-producing purposes are not counted as a resource.
- ³⁸ All licensed vehicles used for income-producing purposes or for transporting a disabled household member are exempt.
- ³⁹ The value of one specially equipped vehicle used to transport a disabled family member is also exempt.
- ⁴⁰ If the fair-market value of the vehicle is greater than $7,500, any equity value greater than $1,500 is counted toward the asset test.
- ⁴¹ The entire equity value of a vehicle used to transport a disabled household member is also exempt.

⁴⁴ A single-parent unit may exempt $12,000 of the fair-market value of one vehicle. A married couple may exempt $12,000 of the fair-market value of two vehicles. The equity value of any additional non-exempt vehicles counts toward the asset limit.

⁶ Nebraska conducted a demonstration project in five counties in 1996 that subjected units to a family cap.

Appendix 1: Component Descriptions

The WRD and this report define a state's TANF program as having a component when the state divides its entire caseload into mutually exclusive groups that are treated differently across more than one policy area. These groups are usually defined by more than one characteristic. Not every state uses components. For those that do, appendix table 1 describes how recipients are divided among the components, how long recipients can remain in the various components, and any interaction between the components in the state.

Appendix 1: Component Description ¹

State	Name	Duration	Description	Maximum time in component ²	Interaction
California	Non-exempt	07/97 - Present	Recipients who do not meet any of the exemption requirements described under the Exempt Description of Component.	Indefinite, unless recipient becomes exempt	Recipients change components only when something happens to change their exemption status.
	Exempt	07/97 - Present	Recipients who meet one of the following are considered exempt for purposes of MAP amounts (payment standard): is a parent or relative, an aided parent of an unaided child, a pregnant woman, or an adult in a Refugee Cash Assistance Unit and receives SSI, In-Home Support Services, State Disability Insurance, or Temporary Worker's Compensation. Unaided non-parent caretakers are also exempt.	Until recipient no longer meets exemption characteristics

State	Name	Duration	Description	Maximum time in component ²	Interaction
Delaware	Time-limited assistance	10/95 - Present	The time-limited TANF program provides financial assistance for families where the caretaker is included in the grant, the caretaker is age 18 or older, and the caretaker is employable. All three of these conditions must be met or the family will be moved to the non-time-limited TANF program. These families face a 36-month cumulative time limit.	Indefinite, unless recipient becomes exempt	A family in the non-time-limited program may be reassigned to time-limited assistance if the adult family member becomes able to work.
	Non-time-limited assistance	10/95 - Present	The non-time-limited TANF program (also referred to as the Children’s Program) provides financial assistance for families where the adult members are mentally, emotionally, or physically unable to work, are caring for an adult or child with a mental or physical disability, or the family includes children who are cared for by a non-parent caretaker who is not included in the grant. These families do not face a time limit, must comply with a non-work-related contract of mutual responsibility, and are eligible for participation in the Transitional Work Program (TWP). Through TWP, each client develops an individualized plan that suits his or her needs and capabilities and can work to gain employment, enter training, or be accepted to a program better suited to meet their long term needs, such as SSI.	Until recipient no longer meets exemption characteristics; Inclusion of persons with temporary disability can last up to six months without medical documentation.	Likewise, a family in the time-limited program may be reassigned to the non-time-limited program if an adult family member becomes disabled or otherwise unable to work. Participants with disabilities in the non-time-limited TANF program are assessed for participation in TWP. Those receiving non-time limited assistance who can work with accommodation or have temporary disabilities are eligible for participation in TWP. When a temporarily disabled non-time-limited assistance participant in TWP is determined to be rehabilitated, the participant will be referred to the time-limited assistance component.

This component is exempt from the reduced Need and Payment Standards, time limits, and work requirements.	Until recipient no longer meets exemption characteristics	Recipients change components only when something happens to change their exemption status.
	Non-exempt	11/95 - Present	Recipients who do not meet any of the exemption requirements described under the Exempt Description of Component.	Indefinite, unless recipient becomes exempt

² Where "no limit" is listed for "maximum time in component," it is assumed that units in this component are bound by state time limits. See table IV.C.1 for information on the maximum amount of time recipients are allowed to receive assistance in the state. For more information on work exemptions and time limit exemptions, see tables III.B.1, IV.C.2(a) and (b), and IV.C.3(a) and (b). Or for more detail, see the WRD.

Appendix 2: Treatment of Unemployment Insurance Income

In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, the federal government created special federally-funded unemployment assistance programs that extended eligibility for benefits and also increased benefit amounts. States had discretion in how they counted the unemployment income under these pandemic programs as well as unemployment aid under the regular unemployment insurance benefit system.⁶⁶ This table captures the treatment of different types of unemployment income for initial eligibility determination, continuing eligibility determination, and benefit computation. The first two columns of this table compare the treatment of unemployment benefits other than the pandemic programs (including both regular state aid and the Extended Benefits that trigger on automatically during periods of high unemployment) under states' standard policies compared with their policy choices during the COVID-19 pandemic. The final three columns of the table describe the treatment of expanded unemployment compensation provided under three federal programs: Pandemic Unemployment Assistance (PUA), Pandemic Emergency Unemployment Compensation (PEUC), and the $600 per week and $300 per week Federal Pandemic Unemployment Compensation (FPUC).⁶⁷ Information on states' treatment of all earned and unearned income can be found in the Welfare Rules Database.

² Regular unemployment insurance provides between 14 and 28 weeks of benefits for unemployed workers, with most states providing 26 weeks (Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, "Policy Basics: How Many Weeks of Unemployment Compensation Are Available?", 2021). The Extended Benefits program provides additional weeks of benefits to unemployed workers who have exhausted the regular benefit and are in states with high unemployment.

³ The Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act expanded unemployment insurance benefits to include Pandemic Unemployment Assistance (PUA), Pandemic Emergency Unemployment Compensation (PEUC), and Federal Pandemic Unemployment Compensation (FPUC). These benefits were extended under the December 2020 relief bill, and discussions are underway regarding possible additional extensions. PUA provides benefits to unemployed workers who are ineligible for any regular unemployment insurance, for example because they are self-employed. PEUC provides additional weeks of benefits to unemployed workers who have exhausted their available weeks of regular benefits. Under the CARES Act, FPUC provided an additional $600 weekly benefit to those eligible for any unemployment insurance for weeks ending from April 5, 2020 through July 25, 2020. The December 2020 bill provided an additional $300 weekly benefit to those eligible for any unemployment insurance; this benefit is currently in place for weeks ending from January 2, 2021 through March 13, 2021.

⁴ As of this writing, FPUC benefits of $300 per week are available through mid-March 2021. Additional legislation is under discussion that may extend and increase the benefit.

⁶ The $300 Federal Pandemic Unemployment Compensation benefit was excluded as income for continuing eligibility and benefit determinations, but included for income eligibility determination at application in January and February 2021. The benefit was excluded for both applicants and recipients beginning in March 2021.

⁹ Additional CARES Act benefits (PUA and PUEC) are treated as Disaster Payments and are exempt as income and as a resource. Disaster Payments are limited to 26 weeks.

¹¹ The Federal Pandemic Unemployment Compensation benefit is excluded as income and as a resource for 12 months. After the 12 month period, if the individual is over the asset limit, then the case is closed.
